

Wilkes Citizen Is Dead

W. C. Greenwood Passed Away Tuesday in Hospital in Alabama

Walter Cleveland Greenwood, 50, member of a prominent Wilkes county family, died in a Sheffield, Ala., hospital last Tuesday afternoon from a stroke of paralysis suffered a week before his death.

A native of Roaring River, Mr. Greenwood was a son of the late S. J. and Margaret Harris Greenwood. Following his marriage to Miss May Bodenheimer, of Elkin, he resided for a number of years in Winston-Salem, where he was associated with the Forsyth Furniture Lines.

He is survived by his wife, two daughters, Mrs. Sam Neaves, and Miss Constance Greenwood, both of Elkin; two granddaughters, Nancy and Patsy Neaves; three sisters, Mrs. M. C. Teague, of Winston-Salem; Mrs. Oscar Jones of Oglesby, Texas, and Mrs. Elmer Burch, of Chesapeake, Va., and one brother, Charles Greenwood, of Charlotte.

His youngest daughter, Miss Constance Greenwood, was on a visit with her parents during his illness, arriving there the day after he was stricken, and Mr. and Mrs. Neaves left Monday to be with him, but arrived shortly after his death.

The body arrived at Elkin Thursday, and funeral rites were held Friday. Interment was in Hollywood cemetery at Elkin.

Shoots Self Rather Than Go To Army

Zalf Carpenter, 36, farm laborer and father of a two year old child at Raleigh, killed himself a few nights ago rather than go to the army, coroner Ray Banks said.

Banks said that Carpenter told members of his family that he was not going to report to Fort Bragg Monday as ordered and would kill himself. Then, with his wife and mother-in-law at a nearby store, Carpenter hooked a piece of wire to the trigger of a shotgun and fired, Banks said.

Counting the value of lint, oil, meal, and linters, cotton is truly America's No. 1 war crop in food, feed, and fighting equipment, says Extension Director I. O. Schaub of State College.

State College Hints To Farm Homes

If you really want to enjoy snap beans, cook them just long enough to make them tender. That way you can still keep the flavor and the bright green color. This cooking method is suggested by nutritionists to save food values.

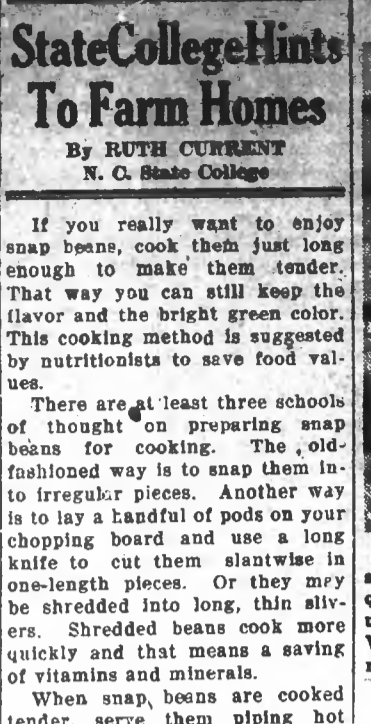

There are at least three schools of thought on preparing snap beans for cooking. The old-fashioned way is to snap them into irregular pieces. Another way is to lay a handful of pods on your chopping board and use a long knife to cut them slantwise in one-length pieces.

When snap beans are cooked tender, serve them piping hot with some added fat and seasonings. Some cooks like to use butter—heated a bit so it has a nice browned flavor. Others prefer bacon fat—sometimes with bits of crisped bacon sprinkled over the top of the dish of green beans.

Young snap beans are a favorite vegetable for home canning. If you're planning to can them, take the advice of canning experts and use a pressure canner. Snap beans, like most other vegetables, must be processed at a high temperature, much higher than the boiling point.

When they're done, drain the water and slip the skins off the beans. Slice for serving, or if you have tiny beans serve them whole. Would you like to have our good Harvard Beet recipe? Write us.

If the beet tops are young enough to be tender, be sure to use these greens. Cook them like any other leafy vegetable—for only a short time in a small amount of water.

Fertilizer manufacturers will have to manufacture their goods on a twelve month basis, because of unusual conditions, and farmers will have to buy earlier this year than usual to help clear the plants.

Milk, butter, cheese, ice cream and other dairy products annually create an output valued at 5 1/2 billion dollars. One out of every 15 families in the U. S. is dependent on milk for a livelihood.

According to the War Food Administration, there are no cotton marketing quotas on the 1943 crop but the cotton loan program will remain in effect without change for the 1943-44 marketing season.
