

Plan to Subsidize And Spur Home Building Studied

W. Wyatt, new National Housing Administrator, said today that the White House had nothing to say immediately.

Wyatt, who was named to the post by President Truman, is expected to launch a housing conference in Washington in the near future. The conference will be the first of a series of such meetings which the government is planning to hold in the coming year.

Another speaker, Norton Long, of O.P.A., told the session that by launching immediately a "broad program" of subsidizing home building, a million homes could be built this year.

Wyatt's movements included a trip to a congressional hearing in Washington as well as at the Government Conference on the housing emergency, which convenes this morning.

The day brought these other developments: The government is considering subsidies to increase the output of some home building materials instead of increasing their prices, the NHA chief told the housing conference.

The House Banking Committee, after hearing Wyatt behind closed doors, considered special legislation to make possible the housing program.

Wyatt had told the committee that he would "play a leading role" in the housing program.

Wyatt renewed his plea that congress put price ceilings on the country's 40,000,000 existing
