Mrs. Bayard Wooten Visits Fairhope

Mrs. Bayard Wooten, internationally known artist, author and lecturer, has her residence at Chapel Hill, North Carolina, in close proximity to her publishers, The University of North Carolina Press. She is a noted professional woman and has a staff of twenty or more artists and craftsmen under her direction. One of her sons, who recently took over the executive management of her emprise, has made it possible for Mrs. Wooten to devote much more of her time to her beloved hobby of photographing the large floral gardens of the United States in neutral color. She has photographed and gathered text material in practically all of the nationally-known gardens of the Atlantic Coast region, and she has developed a series of lectures, illustrated with natural color photographic slides, of all the important gardens which she is delivering in person, to interested groups on her tours.

The occasion of Mrs. Wooten's Fairhope visit, was a two days' assignment at Bellingrath Gardens in Mobile, and being close to Fairhope, she decided to take a week-end off from her strenuous work and visit with her two Godchildren Converse and Edith Harwell of Fairhope, Alabama. Mrs. Wooten's visit to Fairhope came near being a post-man's holiday. She and her assistant, Mr. Lane Atkinson, Jr., of Chapel Hill, spent a greater part of Saturday in photographing the picturesque Eastern Shore of Mobile Bay. They were accompanied on their photographic tour of Fairhope and the Eastern shore, by Dr. Ruth Lindquist, who is Mrs. Wooten's temporary secretary and the manager of her Deep South Tour.

Fairhope, Ala. Towards the end of her Fairhope visit, Mrs. Wooten and her photographic assistant, Mr. Lane Atkinson, Jr., were honorably inducted into the Society of The Mt. Wils. composed of folk who love people, life and beauty.

Mr. Atkinson, a former resident of North Wilkesboro, is a grandson of Mrs. Genie Cardwell of this city, and the late Mr. Cardwell.
