

Ladino Clover Pastures Can Be Seeded In Spring

Ladino clover pastures seeded this spring will help to make up for the pastures and alfalfa you failed to get seeded last fall, says Sam H. Dobson, Extension Agronomy specialist at State College.

Late summer and early fall seedings are preferred but many successful ladino clover pastures have been realized throughout the state when seeded in the spring, Mr. Dobson said. He pointed out that the chances of failure are greater in the spring and the yield the first year will be less, but it seems that where fall seeding was impossible there are cases where the need for grazing will justify taking the chance.

Even though alfalfa can be seeded in the spring, the chances of success are so slim that it is generally not advisable except in the mountains. If your hay supply is short, he suggests that you seed lespedeza or soybeans for hay this spring and get ready for alfalfa in the late summer.

If it is a question of seeding ladino clover pastures or alfalfa, it would be better to seed ladino clover because the ladino will thicken up in case of a poor early stand while alfalfa will not.

Farmers who are planning on Dallis grass and lespedeza, seeding in the spring is the recommended practice, he said.

Regardless of whether late summer or spring seedings are made, a good level of fertility and a good seedbed are necessary. Also, the lime requirement must be met, and 600 to 800 pounds of 2-12-12 fertilizer per acre should be put on the ladino clover pastures at seeding time, Mr. Dobson said.

Egg-Feed Ratio Is At Low Level

The lowest egg-feed ratio ever recorded for December was existing in December 1947, according to C. Brice Ratchford, in charge of Farm Management for the State College Extension Service.

It is expected that the egg-feed ratio will continue low at least until spring, when estimates for the 1948 grain crop are available, the specialist said. If, at that time, a large feed crop is predicted, the ratio should rise, he added.

Despite higher feed costs, egg prices are not likely to rise, he said. At present, egg prices are only 96 per cent of parity or 3 per cent above support level. At the same time, feed prices are well above 100 per cent of parity.

The poultry industry has made real progress in North Carolina during the last 10 years, Mr. Ratchford said. Poultry is normally a good enterprise for Tar Heel farmers, as there are ready markets, and poultry fits in well on small farms. For these and other reasons, North Carolina needs to maintain her poultry industry. The situation should improve within a few months or in a year at the latest.

Farmers who are losing money cannot stay in the business, but those who are making a little money and keeping their poultry will be able to realize more profit when the situation does improve, he said.

Usually such chicks live better and grow faster than late hatched chicks, Prof. Dearstyne said, providing there is good breeding in back of the chicks and careful management is practiced.

Generally speaking, he said, the American breeds hatched from March 1 to 15 should give the desired results. Leghorns hatched from March 15 to April 15 should produce early eggs with a minimum chance of molt.

Orders should be placed at once by those desiring such chicks, Prof. Dearstyne said, because many of the hatcheries are booked far in advance.
