Support And Use Your Public Library

A report of circulation of the Wilkes Public Library is published in this newspaper, showing that during the past year the library was used to such an extent as to average one book for every man, woman and child in Wilkes county.

But even at that figure, the library could be used more.

For the benefit of those who have not taken the trouble to find out, we give you a few pertinent facts.

The library is now located in the North Wilkesboro town hall. It is a public institution operated by the state, county and the town of North Wilkesboro.

Public funds are appropriated sparingly. The library never has any surplus and must operate economically.

The library operates a bookmobile into every major community in Wilkes county, serving 51 established book stations and many other people directly en route.

The library has over 6,000 volumes, but that does not mean that it has any to spare.

When you borrow a book and read it, be sure to return it promptly, because a book overdue from the library is a frozen asset that nobody can use and it does nobody good when not in circulation or when it is lost.

If you buy a good book and read it, and find that you have no more use for it you could render a public service by donating it to the library.

Visit the public library often. It is yours to use and enjoy.

Tips Are Given On Heat Illness

"Heatsickness and sunstroke are responsible for the loss of many lives each summer," County Agent Paul Choplin of the State College Extension Service commented today.

With high temperatures during the rush of harvesting, it is easy to be overcome by several forms of heat illness, he added.

The county agent explained that sunstroke results from prolonged exposure to the sun's rays. Heatstroke may result from excessive heat without exposure to the sun. The effects are the same in both cases, and may in some instances prove fatal. Some symptoms are: hot and dry skin, face red and flushed, high temperature, intense headache, breathing hard and loud, pupils enlarged but of equal size, and unconsciousness.

The National Safety Council recommends the following suggestions for treating an individual stricken with sunstroke or heatstroke:

Move to a cool, shady place, strip to the underclothing, lay on back with head and shoulders raised.

Apply ice or cold cloths to head, cool the body gradually with a cool bath or wrap the person in a sheet and sprinkle with cool water. Gently rub limbs toward the heart.

After treating for several minutes, stop and observe patient. If skin becomes hot again, resume treatment.

If conscious, give cool drinks, not ice cold. Do not give stimulants.

Get the patient to a physician or a hospital as soon as possible. Continue treatment enroute.

CHURCHILL TELLS 'EM

(Charlotte Observer)

Winston Churchill has not lost his power of rhetoric by being for a while in the minority. Those who heard him say in his campaign speech Saturday, "Never before in the history of human government has such great havoc been wrought by such small men," must have recalled his famous wartime words, "Never have so many owed so much to so few."

But he was correct in estimating the havoc wrought by the small men. They got a loan of $3.5 billion from the United States and ran through with it. They got another loan from Canada and ran through with that. They got the largest share of ECA funds, and ran through with them.

It is all because the Labor government took on socialistic luxuries that the country could not afford. The British people are now being taxed 40 per cent of their national income to support these luxuries, and their economy cannot stand it.

It has been estimated that 35 per cent is all any economy can afford to pay in taxes without going socialist. Free economy breaks down under the strain when more taxes than that are extracted from private business.

With Britain paying more than 40 per cent, one nationalization must follow another, and still the government cannot get enough money for its socialistic luxuries and must, as Churchill said, "dissipate" overseas assets amounting to $8 billion. Still it must depend on the United States to pay for the luxuries that its own economy cannot support.

The other countries of western Europe have been moving away from socialism while Britain has been getting deeper and deeper into it. The result is that conditions in those countries are steadily improving as they move away from socialism, and conditions in Britain get worse and worse.

Travelers in Europe this summer have confirmed Churchill's remark that food is more plentiful and cheaper on the continent than it is in England.

But his most telling blow at socialism was his assertion that there is no difference between the aims of socialism and communism; they both aim at the same targets.

The only difference, he said truly, is in personnel. The socialists are Englishmen, and therefore "our fellow countrymen, however misguided."

"The Communists, on the other hand, are lackeys and tools of a foreign power seeking the ruin of Britain and its subordination to the decrees of the oligarchy of Moscow."

Right again, Mr. Churchill.

EARTH-BOUND

So many people can be found
Who seem in life to be earth-bound;
They're bound by things of time and place
And ne'er made free to run life's race;
They're bound by habits that are bad,
The consequence of which is sad;
They're bound in body, mind and soul,
Therefore they never reach life's goal.

Great multitudes are bound by pride
And think they're on life's highest tide;
They're bound by customs of the land
That hold them back from things more grand;
They're bound by ugly, sinful traits
That never lead to heaven's gates;
They're bound by what their fellows do,
And by the course that they pursue.

Yes, men are bound, as with a thong,
To business that they know is wrong;
Bound by money, greed and lust,
And principles we cannot trust;
They're bound by pleasures of the earth
That never make for truest worth;
They're bound with hurtful, base desires
That often kindle criminal's fires.

O earth-bound man, look up to God,
And rise in life above the sod—
Above the things that hold you down
And cheat you out of life's true crown;
For God has wondrous things in store,
Beyond this sinful earthly shore,
For those who break with earthly ties
And in their hearts and spirits rise!
