Forty Per Cent True: Sixty Per Cent False

The ridiculous attempt to cover up for the liquor industry by saying that alcoholism does not have an alcoholic origin but is only a "symptom" of personality disorders, is 40 per cent true and 60 per cent false.

It would be even more accurate to say that it is 40 per cent true and 100 per cent false. The 40 per cent of truth is found in the fact that about that proportion of alcoholism does arise out of neuroticism. The 100 per cent falsity is involved in the ignoring of the fact that 60 per cent of alcoholism arises only out of the use of alcohol and not out of any underlying abnormality.

Alcoholism is less in those states and counties where drinking is least.

Alcoholism is least where dry sentiment is strongest.

Public policies which repress the traffic in intoxicants, and educational policies which tend to discourage drinking, offer the only helpful means of checking the increase in alcoholism.

Alcoholism is now increasing. It is increasing because the sanction of law supports the alcohol custom; because motion pictures, the radio (beer advertising), many periodicals and much of the fiction output of the country, by suggestion and propagandistic teaching, tend to increase the number of drinkers and the amount of liquor consumed.

Alcoholics are being rehabilitated in significant numbers but they are being rehabilitated.

The Spotlight On Drunk Driving

The death of Margaret Mitchell, author of Gone With the Wind, in an accident for which drunken driving was responsible, has turned the spotlight on this national problem.

Thousands of others, less prominent than Miss Mitchell, must die each year because of drunken men at the wheel.

The first reaction of many editors has been, "Throw the book at drunken drivers."

If they are talking about the book of the law, perhaps this would do some good. The trouble is that the average drunken driver does not know he is drunk. What is still more important, is that the average drunken driver who has had a drink or two but is not drunk in the ordinary sense of the word, has no idea that he is a dangerous driver. Perhaps it would be better to throw the book of science at all drivers. Teach them that a little beer, or a cocktail or two before driving, is dangerous, then throw the book of the law at the places along our highways which sell intoxicants.

ALPHABETICAL EXHORTATIONS

A life that's hid in Christ our Lord
Brings to the soul a rich reward.

Cast not the truth of God away
Despite what others do and say.

Each day you live seek God's good grace
For strength to keep you in your place.

Give of your best in time and means,
However wrong another leans.

Incline your heart to all that's right
Just as the saints who walk in light.

Keep true if you would prove your worth
Long after you have left the earth.

Make souls the gems you seek to gain,
Nor stop for persecution's pain.

Oppose the wrong by word and deed,
Proud of the fact that you'll succeed.

Quick as the Lord reveals each plan
Rise up and meet it as a man.

Seek wealth and riches for your soul
That perish not as ages roll.

Urge men to Jesus Christ to flee,
Vile though in life they seem to be.

Weave holiness into your name,
Exhorting others to the same.

Yearn for the things that are above,
Zealous for the God of love.

Domestic consumption of cotton declined more than seasonally in June and at 600,000 bales was 200,000 below June, 1948. Exports through May this season were nearly two and one-third times as large as in the same period last year.

Lesson Eleven

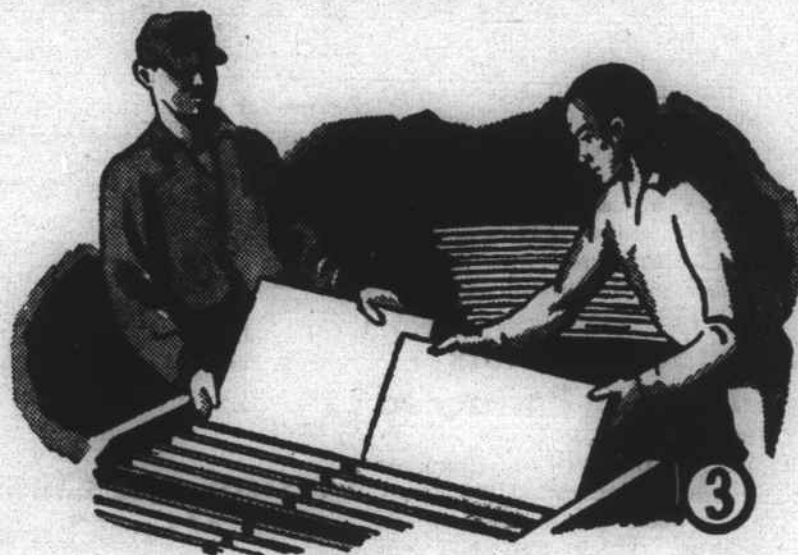

The Story Of Rayon

Raw Material for rayon is cellulose. It comes primarily from two sources—wood pulp and cotton linters. Linters are the short fibers left on the seed after ginning.

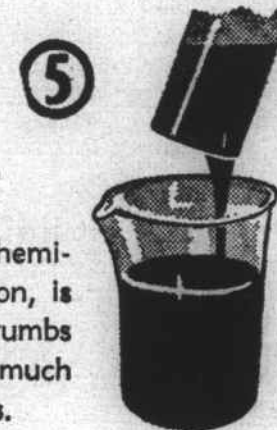

Cellulose is the principle part of the cotton linter or wood fiber.

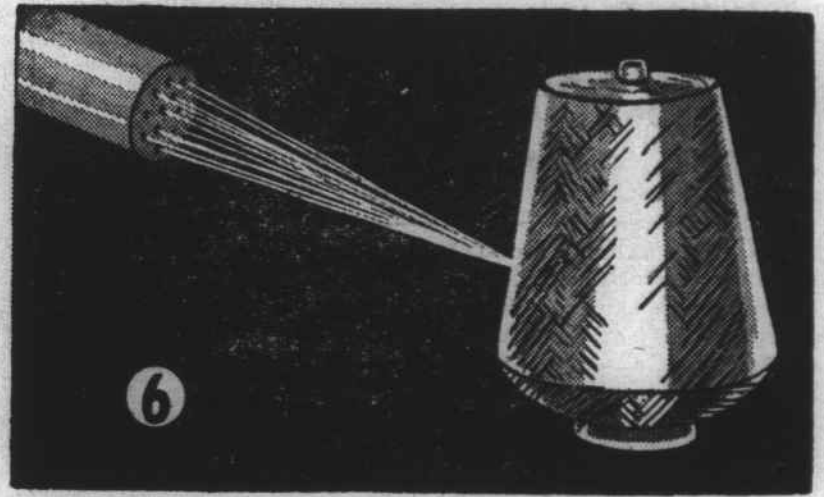

Sheets of Cellulose are steeped in a solution of caustic soda to extract impurities and to change them chemically to alkali cellulose.

Cellulose Crumbs are made by putting the sheets through revolving blades which break them into small, fluffy particles.

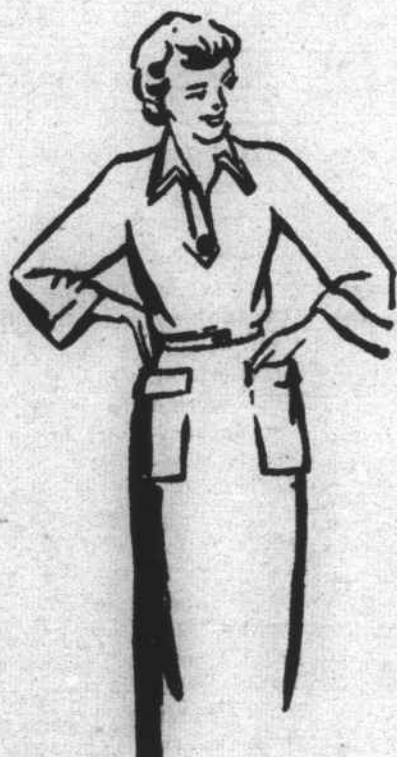

Viscose Solution, the next chemical stage in producing rayon, is made by dissolving the crumbs to a liquid, in appearance much like clear, golden molasses.

Chemical Spinning is the last magic step in making rayon yarn. The tiny spinnerette is thimble sized, with hundreds of holes scarcely visible to the human eye. Each hole forms a filament. Combined filaments form yarn, which is wound on bobbins, cones, or into skeins as required by the manufacturers of rayon fabrics.

And Now To The User! After assisting in many steps in the making of rayon yarn, Electricity assists in weaving, dyeing, and the fashioning of garments. Again, Electricity is waiting in your home—to wash, dry, and iron the fabric modern chemistry has given a place alongside linen, wool, silk, and cotton.
