

Are You Clothed In Chemicals?

Don't look now, fashion-wise femmes, but you'll be wearing chemicals this season! Believe it or not, you'll go forth, garbed not in test tube, but dressed up to-the-minute in Fall's latest creation made possible by chemists.

It seems that the nation's research laboratories for many of the top fabric mills have been spending countless hours of research on fabric resiliency, durability, and crease resistance. Finally they have arrived with the answer to the female dilemma... washability of wools!

From our spies in San Francisco word that the talented sportswear designer, Stephanie Koret, already has made much of his new fabric innovation in her Fall collection. In addition to her creations of washable worsted wool jersey (Stephanie appropriately calls them "Tubnit Pairs-Offs"), this designer has gone even further into the chemically-treated fabric field. She's come up with a nylon-blended-with-acetate fabric, which after being accordian pleated, remains permanently guaranteed unconditionally washable. Yes, even the pleats are guaranteed to remain intact!

What the buying public is completely unaware of is the fact that much sweat and tears have been expended to make this "Tub-pleat" skirt washable. In addition to an entire line of skirts, blouses, and a colorful weskit, Koret of California has brought out a group of dresses created in the same fabric... and with myriad pleats too!

To go into this business of a bit further, we find that, at long last, some clever soul has worked out a process, and this you won't believe, to make worst-

THREE STAGES IN KOREAN WAR BEFORE GIs BEGAN STRIKING BACK

SQUEEZED INTO A POCKET, about the size of the State of Connecticut, American troops have for days been engaged in desperate delaying struggles to keep the Red invaders from reaching the supply port of Pusan. In the time gained, reinforcements have arrived and new GI counter-attacks are reported. The bitterest battle of the war rages outside Masan, gateway to Pusan. The above maps tell the story of enemy advances at three critical phases. Planned withdrawals created the pocket where the heavy fighting now centers. (Central Press) ed gabardine guaranteed moth-proof! Yes, no longer need you worry that behind your back some undeserving moth is having a time for himself on your latest creation. Well, worry no more... that chemical age is here!

In Stephanie Koret's Fall collection, chemically treated to resist the advances of moths, are many classics interpreted in the season's latest styles. Worsted gabardine skirts, pencil-slim to emphasize the fashionable sheath look, softly flared skirts, and slacks all carry the five year guarantee against moth damage.

So, when you saunter forth in the latest autumn attire, think of these tireless tyros... the chemical engineers in the fabric industry. They've done so much to keep pace with the nation's designers and producers in the apparel industry... they've helped to bring you delectable, delightful fare for your Fall fashion menu!

Shrubbery Topic For Millers Creek Club

Millers Creek Home Demonstration club met at the home of Mrs. Cecil Kilby, Thursday, July 20, 1:30 p. m. The meeting was opened by our president Mrs. Paul Delp. We sang "God Bless America," and repeated together the "club collect." The roll call showed seventeen members and four visitors, Mrs. H. D. Caudill, Jr., Miss Bonita Hayes, Miss Lila Gilreath, Miss Mattie Whittington, present.

Mrs. Ray Bumgarner introduced Mrs. Robert Gibbs, who gave a very interesting talk on "Girl Scouting and what it will mean to the young girls in our community. The club has voted to sponsor the 'Girl Scout movement.' A committee was named with Mrs. Ray Bumgarner as leader.

Mrs. Rex Bumgarner had charge of the demonstration, "Shrub Identification." She showed us how to prepare and root shrubbery. Mrs. Allen Phillips in the absence of Mrs. Ruff hockery assisted her.

The meeting was closed with a prayer in union.

Our hostesses, Mrs. Cecil Kilby and co-hostess, Mrs. James Foster served cakes and watermelon which were enjoyed by all.—reported.
