To the Correspondents of HENRY CLAY.

TIME subscriber being now engaged in an enlargement and completion of his Life AND TIMES OF HEXNY CLAY, finds, on examination of Mr. Clay's papers and correspondence at Ashland, that his Private Correspondence is of material importance for a complete exhibition of his character and history, and of those portions of the history of the times with which he was connected. As his own letters, they are now scattered over the country in the hands of his numerous correspondents, and have doubtless been preserved. No 36 matter how private or even confidential the correspondence may have been, if not of a nature to render its posthumous publication improper, it is a very effective mode of illustrating character, and is often important in history. The subscriber therefore respectfully and earnestly requests all or later periods of his life, in public or in private stations, who may be in possession of original letters from Mr. Clay on any subject whatever not sacred to privacy after death, that they will be pleased, if not inconsistent with their feelings, to forward such letters to the publishers of the work, A.
