Author of Fushion and Fusine,

Author of Vashion and Pusine,

Price, 61, 25, A New Book by the author of "Fac Famine," which attained, in three months, a sale of FORTY THOUSAND COPIES, and which was republished in Leipsic, St. Petersburgh, Vienna, and in three editious in Loudon, is a matter well calin three editions in London, is a matter well calculated to excite more than ordinary interest.

The Old Homestad, while not so tragic and intense in its character as Fashion and Familie, is, if anything, of profounder interest, and appeals with greater force to the sympathies of the radier. The story opens in the City of Naw York, where there are many scenes of pathos, suffering, and tragic power? but, as the book progresses, the clouds disperse, we are introduced to the Old Homestead among the Catskills of the Hudsor, where we are presented with some of the most delightful and graphic rural pictures over given in an American book. Mrs. Stonbead disperse in many places in this book, a humor that rivals that of Dickens, and a dramatic force, grasp of thought, power of expression, and viridness of description, of which she is peculiarly the master — spendor. which she is possible the master of the think, to any of her contemporaries.

cently published.

From the Boston Post.

As a literary work, it is far superior to Fashion and Famine. Many portions are intensely interesting.

From the Boston Olive Branch.

Many of the scenes are laid in the humble walks of life, and all the author's fine descriptive powers are brought to bear upon them. The comfordess room, where the girl-watcher waits for her dying father—where they meet at last in his death-hour, and part forever; the simple but theerful home of Chester; the long might arenay at Ballows the resting. a passenger train will leave Raleigh in the afternoon, on the arrival of the train from the West chester; the long night agony at Religive; the solemn burial, with only those two lonely children for mourners; and the exquisite pictures of the at the Old Homestead—all show the tenderness of the woman, combined with the skill of the actist.
