Wood's Therapeutics And Pharmacology.
A Treatise on Therapeutics, and Pharmacology, or Materia Medica. By George B. Wood, M. D., professor of the theory and practice of medicine in the University of Pennsylvania; President of the College of Physicians, Philadelphia; one of Authors of the U. S. Dispensatory; author of Wood's Practice of Medicine, etc., etc.
The value of this treatise may be inferred from the high reputation which the author has acquired by his previous works. The publishers, therefore, confidently trust that it will at once attain a position equally elevated among the standard works on medicine.
The work is in two large octavo volumes, and in substantial sheep binding.

U. S. LAND AND PENSION AGENCY.
TO all those for whom I have collected Land Warrants, less than 160 acres, I have the number and particulars of said warrant, and, by calling on or writing to me, I can get each one an increase of pay; and to all the Soldiers who rendered 14 days' service in any of the wars since 1790, they, or their widows, or minor child or children, are entitled to land. They will do well to call at this Agency. I have the rolls for the State of North Carolina.
Also, all Widows of the Revolutionary War are entitled to land. Wagon Masters and Teamsters are embraced among the numerous Laws; and all those who think they have a claim are respectfully invited to call and have their claims investigated.
My terms are no charge, unless I succeed!—After 15 years' experience, I flatter myself that I understand my business, and all the numerous laws in such cases. Give me a call, and have your claims investigated before it will be forever too late.
Enlisted Soldiers, having located lands in Illinois and Missouri, I will pay the highest cash prices for them. I have the number, Townships and locations of several hundred in whose name they appear of record.
The highest cash prices paid for land warrants. Office opposite Lawrence's Hotel, at the Express Office. J. H. KIRKHAM.

Singer's Sewing Machines.
THESE celebrated machines are in practical and profitable use in all parts of the civilized world. In all the various trades, and in sewing every sort of fabric, either of cloth or leather, they have been fully tried and approved—Sewing machines of other manufacturers often fail to work, but being strong, durable, and complete in construction and workmanship. A perfect sewing machine kept employed affords a clear profit of $1,000 a year, but an imperfect one is a source of constant vexation and loss. The entire reliability of our machine is one great reason for their unparalleled popularity.
SINGER'S MACHINES ALWAYS OPERATE PERFECTLY,
MACHINES FOR FAMILY SEWING,
of a dull and delicate construction, are recommended by other manufacturers. Such machines are made to catch the eye, not to perform substantial work. The truth is, family sewing machines ought to be stronger than others, because they go into unskilful hands than when sold to mechanicians, and are used for a greater variety of work. The machines which have proved best for all other purposes must be best for family use, and they are Singer's. The speed of our machines has lately been doubled. No other can compare with them in quantity of work.
☞ New machines of the latest improved style will be exchanged on liberal terms for old sewing machines of our own make, or for operative machines of other manufactures. Local agents wanted to sell our machines.
N. B.—All persons desiring full information about sewing machines, can obtain it by applying for a copy of "I. M. Singer & Co's. Gazette," a paper devoted entirely to the subject. It will be sent gratis I. M. SINGER & CO.

FIRST PREMIUM!
KNUT AND SCREWING MACHINE,
YOUNG'S PATENT.
IMPORTANT TO MILLERS AND MILL OWNERS.
THIS Machine received the first premium at the North Carolina State Fair, and wherever exhibited to the public at the fairs now in use in the State. Seven Hundred of them are now running in North Carolina, all of which are now in operation, and have given the most entire satisfaction in regard both to performance and durability, some having run six years and perfect as well now as they did at first, and have not had an order one day. We take pleasure in saying to the public that this is the most valuable Machine to make rods for that. They are warranted for five years, and delivered at the Mill, any where in the state. SANFORD BABCOCK, DENTIST.
Office over D. C. Murray's Store,
OPPOSITE THE POST-OFFICE,
OF all the causes which gradually reduce the human system to the final termination of life, few are more general, or more constant and effective than decay in the Teeth.
The Dental nerves are also connected with other important organs which have to indicate a revulsion to all parts of the human system, that its various organs often suffer from such nervous affections of the teeth. By a skilful use of Dental Surgery, affords the most effectual means of relief, and by timely applications, teeth may be preserved for life. S. Babcock will perform all operations pertaining to Dentistry, with the greatest care and in a scientific manner.
Treatment of Children's Teeth in different diseases, operation for Diseased Gums, Ulcers and Tumors of the mouth. Artificial Teeth inserted from one to a full set, on Gold, Silver or Platina plates with or without gums.
The greatest care will be taken to render the appearance and a peculiar natural harmony of the Teeth. Many instances fail in giving the natural character to the patient, in substituting the artificial Teeth, instead of harmonizing with the laws of nature, exhibit an unmeaning greatness, expression frequently resembling the character of some of her pets one than that for whom they were intended for. DREAMING OF THEE.

BY SARAH J. C. WHITTLESEY.

The blue eyes of heaven are beaming,
Thick moon-beams drift over the lea,
And here in the starlight, I am dreaming—
Sweet Katie, I'm dreaming of thee;
You know the warm, sunshiny meadow,
And the little rill threading across,
Where we used to sit down in the shadow,
On the old oak's soft cushion of moss!

Oh! here in the eve-hush, sweet Katie,
I'm thinking so sadly again,
O'er the dreams in that far, quiet valley,
We cherished so fondly, in vain!
The leaves of the old oak is scattered,
The green of the meadow is o'er,
And all the bright roses are scattered,
That grew on thy heart's sunny shore!

Alas! that thy blue eye, sweet Katie,
So early should weep o'er the lea,
Of the wreath you twined, down the valley,
On the old oak's soft cushion of moss!
But heed not the dark, gloomy shadow,
That mantles thy young heart with sorrow;
There is, yet, a warm sunshiny meadow,
Sweet Katie—a brighter to-morrow!

AN AWKWARD PREDICAMENT.

I was once engaged to be married, (how I went so far as that is a marvel to me still,) but an incident of so frightful a character took place as to put the matter entirely out of the question. I was a young under-graduate, spending the summer with a reading party at the Irish lakes, when I met with—with Lucy, and got, in short, to be accepted. She was residing with her mother, in the same hotel in Killarney as ourselves, and we at met every day. We boated on the lake together, and fished, and sang, and read. We landed on the wooded islands in the soft summer evenings, to take our tea in gipsey fashion, and to sketch; but she and I mostly whispered—not about love at all, as I remember, but of the weather and the rubric; only it seemed an sweet duty to sink our voices and speak low and soft.

Once, on a party over the moors, while I was leading her pony over some boggy ground, I caught her hand by mistake instead of her bridle, and she did not snatch it away. It was the heyday and the prime of my life, my friend, and that youth of thought which no power can ever more renew. I knew what she felt, and what would please her, as soon as the feeling and the wish themselves were born. Our thought—my thought, at least—leaped out to and with thought ere thought could well itself with speech. She took a fancy to a huge mastiff dog belonging to a fisherman, and I bought it for her at once, although it was terribly savage, and, except for Lucy's liking it, not either good or beautiful. Its name, also—the only one it would answer to, and sometimes it would not to that—was Tower, not a name for a lady's pet at all, and scarcely for a gentleman's. There was a little enclosed field, hedged in by a coppice, which sloped into the lake, about a mile from the hotel; and those Lucy agreed (for the first time) to meet me alone. I was to be there before breakfast, at 8 o'clock in the morning, and you may be sure I was there at six—with Tower.

Perhaps I was never happier than at that particular time. The universal nature seemed in harmony with my blissful feelings. The sun shone out bright and clear, so that the fresh morning breeze could scarcely cool the pleasant throbbing of my blood; but the blue dipping waves of the lake looked irresistibly tempting, and I could not resist a swim. Just a plunge, and out again, thought I; for though I had such plenty of time to spare, I determined to be dressed and ready for the interview an hour at least before the appointed time. Lucy might, how possibly, be a little earlier, and at all events, with such an awful consequence in possible approbation, I would run the shadow of a risk. Moss my clothes, mind them," said I to Tower. (The dog has got the name, at once magnetically enough) for I had heard of such things as clothes being stolen from unconscious slippers before them, with results not to be thought of, and in I went. I remember the delight of that bath even to this day, the glow, the freshness, the luxurious softness of each particular wave, just as the last view which his eyes rested on is painted on the memory of one who has been stricken blind, or the last loved melody is treasured in that of a man stunned deaf by a fall; it was my last perfect pleasure, and succeeded by a shock that I shall never, I think, quite get over.

When I had bathed as long as I judged to be prudent, I landed and advanced towards the spot where my garments and Tower lay; as I did so every individual hair upon his back seemed to bristled with fury, his eyes kindled with crude of fire; he gave me notice by a low determined growl that he would spring on me and tear me into fragments if I approached nearer; it was evident that he did not recognize me in the least, without any clothes. "Tow, Tow, Tow, Tow, Tow," said I pleasantly, "good old Tow, you remember me; but the brute, like the friend whom we have known in a better day, and appeal to when in different apparel, only shook his head in a menacing manner, and showed his teeth the more. "Tower, be quiet, sir; how dare you—Tow, Tow, Tow—Tower—(here he nearly had a bit of my calf off)—you nasty, brutal dog; go away, sir—go; ain't you ashamed of yourself?" Drops of foam oozed through the teeth of the ferocious monster as he stood up with full sweet of those regretting words, but he manifested no sign of remorse or sorrow. My situation became serious in the extreme; what if he chose to sit there, on my personal apparel, until——?

At this idea, too terrible to be considered, a profuse perspiration broke out all over me. Presently, feeling a little cold, I went back into the lake again to consider what was to be done, and pondering upon the fell design of enticing Tower into the water and there drowning him. Above and faithful being equally thrown away upon him, I tried stones; I heaved at him with all my force the largest pebbles I could select, the majority of which he evaded by leaping from side to side, and those which struck him received him as furious that I believe he would have killed and eat me if he could, whether I was dressed or not, but he would not venture into the water after me still.

At last, the time drawing on apace for the appointed interview which I had once looked forward to with such delight and expectation, I was left, in an agony of shame and rage, to hide myself in a dry ditch in the neighboring copse, where I could see what took place without being seen, and there I covered myself over, like a ladie in the wood, with leaves.

Presently my Lucy came down, a little more carefully dressed than usual and looking all grace and modesty; the dog began to howl as she drew near; she saw him, and she saw my clothes, and the notion that I was drowned! (I could see it in her expressive countenance) fainted upon her set once; for one instant she looked as though about to faint, and the next she sped off again to the hotel with the speed of a deer. Gentlemen Reviewers! I decided upon securing a portion of my garments, at least, or upon perishing in the attempt, and rushed out of the thicket for the purpose, but my courage failed me as I heard the savage animal, and I found myself (in some confusion and palpitating manner) back in my dry ditch again, with the sensation of a loss of blood and pain; my request had not been effected—perhaps, because there was nothing to cover it—without considerable risk, and the least and hastiest me severely. I pronounce that, from the excitement, frightful as my position was, it did not move me so much as the reflection of the losses that would be showered down on that vile creature. I knew that he would be considered by Lucy and the rest as a sort of cup of Monmouth, an affectionate and sagacious creature, watching patiently at his apparently prostrate but fond master that would never again return to him.

Presently they all came back, Lucy and her mother, and all the maid-servants from the inn, besides my fellow-students and fishermen with drag-nets, and a medical man with blankets and brandy (how I envied the blankets and the brandy!) As I expected, neither the women's cries nor the men's labor in vain disturbed me half as much as the patient and careful search of Towser; I could not repress a groan of horror and indignation: "Hush, hush," said Lucy, and there was a silence through which I could distinctly hear Towser licking his chops. I was drowned by this time, and hallooed out to my friend Sandford—"Sandford and nobody else"—to come into the copse with a blanket.

I remember nothing more distinctly. Immediately peals of laughter, now smothered, now breaking irrepressibly forth; expressions of thankfulness, of affection, of sympathy beginning—but never finished—burst in upon, as it were, by floods of merriment; and the barking, the eternal barking, of that execrable dog. I left Killarney that same evening; Lucy, and the mother of Lucy, and my fellow-students, and the abominable Towser; I left them for good and all; and that was how my engagement was broken off, and why there is no Mrs. Penny Flash, consolidated the curate, who had turned from non-entire to deep carnation, and from that to almost black, during the recital.

TWO THOUSAND THREE HUNDRED DESERTERS. Col. Borden, for many years private Secretary to Ex-President Santa Anna and a Colonel in the Mexican army, delivered a long and very interesting lecture in New York on Friday evening last, on "Mexico and her People. The following extract from that lecture shows how the American armies that entered that country during the late war, always had such a number reported as "missing" after each battle

The treatment of Mexican people by foreigners has been almost invariably ungrateful. During the Mexican war 2,000 men
