

SPEECH OF HON. JOHN KERRY.
Delivered in the House of Representatives, March 18, 1864, on the Missouri Land Bill.
Mr. KERRY did not agree either with the gentleman from Ohio [Mr. Campbell] who addressed the Senate on this subject, or with the honorable member from Virginia [Mr. Bayly] who had just concluded his remarks. He differed from Mr. Campbell in his opinion, and from Mr. Bayly in his facts. He considered the position he had occupied in the House of Representatives, in his opinion, to be the right one. He thought it was the duty of the Government to make appropriations of money or lands for works of internal improvement. He believed that the Government had the right to make such appropriations for the purpose of promoting the general welfare of the country. He thought that the Government had the right to acquire the lands of the States for the purpose of promoting the general welfare of the country. He thought that the Government had the right to acquire the lands of the States for the purpose of promoting the general welfare of the country.

AN ODD SPARK FROM THE SOUTH.
From the Montgomery Advertiser, May 21, 1863.
We perceive that most of our citizens are filled with indignation at the late report of the Federal Government, in relation to the Missouri land bill. We are glad to see that the demand for such a bill is so general, and we are confident that it will be speedily adopted. We are glad to see that the demand for such a bill is so general, and we are confident that it will be speedily adopted. We are glad to see that the demand for such a bill is so general, and we are confident that it will be speedily adopted.

A SAD STORY OF THE FLOOD.
We gave a few days since a brief account of the terrible calamity by the flood at the village of Raccoon, Illinois. The following particulars were taken from the Rockford (Ill.) Register of June 2d:
We were present with the Rev. Mr. May's family on the 27th of May, when they were first informed of the approaching disaster. At that time the water was only a few feet above the ordinary level of the river. At that time the water was only a few feet above the ordinary level of the river. At that time the water was only a few feet above the ordinary level of the river.

THE ARTISTS' OLD AGE.
By MICHAEL ANGELO, IN HIS 96TH YEAR.
Well-nigh the verge now is my age,
And my frail frame, through trouble and care,
Draws night that common hours where at last,
Of weary action, be it hard or good,
Must close account be rendered. Well I know
How vain will then appear that favorite art,
Side idling long, and merriment of my heart,
For all the vain that man desires below.
And ever remorseful thought the past up-
braids,
And fear of twofold death my soul alarms—
That which must come, and that beyond the grave.
Picture and sculpture long my soul
charme,
And to that love divine I turn for aid.
Who from the eyes extends his arms to my glory.
