From the Southern Confederacy.] THE DEVIL'S VISIT TO "OLD ABE." BY REV. E P. BIRCH, OF LA GRANGE, GA.

Written on the occasion of Lincoln's Procla mation for Prayer and fasting after the battle of Manassas. Revised and improved expressly for the La Grange Reporter, by the author.

Old Abe was sitting in his chair of State, With one foot on the mantle and one on the grate, Now smeking his pipe, and then scratching his

But a sharp, angry crashing, A confusion and clashing, Like things in general, promiscuously smashing. "It's the Devil !" thought Abe, in the sorest of frights,

Or a rebel "masked battery" on "Arlington Heights." On the wings of the midnight winds it flew, And nearer it came and louder it grew, 'Till Washington City seemed all in a stew.

It paused just before The "White House" door, And then died away with an explosive roar. "It's the Devil!" said Lincoln; and sure he's right, For just at that moment there gleamed on his sight

The giare of a horrible sulphurous light, Encircling a form so ghestly and grim, That his heart ceased to beat, and his eyes grew dim. That form stood before him, majestic and dread, With large cloven feet, and huge horns on his

Mr. Lincoln was seized with a terrible quaking. And the bones in his skin were rattling and shak-Like the "dry bones" in the "Valley of Vision,

With such a dreadful collision, As threatened to make a "long division" Of his body and members, without "legal deci sion. 'How's your health, Mr. Lincoln? said old nick with a grin;

"I have only stepped in To renew old acquaintance with your honor again. How are Seward, and Scott, and good Mrs. L? hope all your friends are still hearty and well. Manassas. Like a miserable pack of terrified asses. Was't for this that I labored with vigilant toil. To sow tares of contention all over your soil?— To build up your party with lying pretensions, With demagogue tricks and Chicago Conventions? It this is the truit of my labor and zeal, Ot a shallow-brained fool, With the form of an ape and the head of a calf. It is sowing the whirlwind and reaping the chaff. "What say you to this?" cried Old Nick, waxing Quoth President Lincoln, "You must ask Gen.

Too mean to let live, and too worthless to shoot. But to come to the point more directly in hand. Allow me once more in good faith to demand

Do you think that Jehovah will favor your cause, While you murder, and steal, and violate laws? Will your prayers be heard when you ask the Eternal,

And lose it or win, You must now begin, To fight with the spirit of 'Seventy-Siz,' And abancon you pitiful Yankee tricks."

Quoth "honest Old Abe," "I'm in a very bad fix." "You are right, now, for once," said old Nick with But such are the fruits of transgression and sin ;

You made the disease you must seek for the cure. And now, in conclusion, your attention I call To a single fact more -'tis the saddest of all : (As he spoke the hot tears came flush to his eyes,) The Gospel has made me 'the father of lies'-And the record is true. From the very begin-

But it stirs up my soul with grief and vexation, To see your abominable Yankee nation, Outstripping me far in the depths of its shame, And heaping repreach on my kingdom and name. "I've one word to add; it's a terrible one! The race of your treachery is almost run;

Your political sky looks dark and dun; The fate-clouds are gathering o'er your setting You have ruined your nation-degraded its name-

The avenger is coming. O'er your dark future path Is brooding a storm of terrible wrath. The wrongs of oppression, the blood of the slain, The pleadings of widows for their lost ones again,

When the roas of their guns shall fill you with And the flash of their sabres shall gleam on your sight.

shall fall, And sweep you away in its ruins to hell— I have finished my mission, Farewell! Farewell!"

Thus saying, he left in a moment of time. And wound up his speech, where I wind up my
