WEDNESDAY MORNING, MARCH 5, 1862

THE FEDERAL CONGRESS.

From a report of the proceedings in the Feder-Congress on Thursday, the 29th February, We extract the following:
SENATE - Mr. Wilkinson, of Minnesots.

(Rep.,) offered the following resolution .

Whereas, Lazarus W. Powell, a.ter severa States had severed themselves from the Union, on the 20th of June last attended a large Southern States rights Convention, and was President thereof, and when resolutions were passed ap-proving the neutrality of Kentucky and denouncing the war; and also attended another Convention on the 10th of September, where more reso lutions were passed of the same import; and said Powell had given all aid and comfort to the enemy he could from the position he occupied : There-

Resolved, That said Lazarus W. Powell be expelled from the Senate. Referred to the Committee of the Judiciary. Mr. Fessenden, of Maine, (Rep.,) from the Committee on Finance, reported back the Appropriation bill. Mr. Sherman, of Ohio, (Rep.,) called attention to those large appropriations, as showing the necessity for passing measures for retrench-

Mr. Trumbull, of Illinois, (Rep.,) asked how many men they were providing for? Mr. Fessenden said he did not know.

Mr. Trumbull said he thought there was s disposition to over estimate the number of troops. For instance, it had been reported in the newspapers that there 50,000 men attacking Fort Donelson, whereas, in fact, there were only about 28,000 men there. He thought this fact should be known for the honor of the gallant men who captured that fort, marching on entrenchments held by nearly their own number.

The amendments of the Committee were adopted, with the exception of $76,000,000 for the Quartermaster's Department, which was objected to by the House.

Mr. Hale said it was no use to make such appropriations, as we had no money to pay; there were two hundred millions deficiency since last on, and now adding twenty-six might as well pass a bankrupt law and let the Government take the benefit of it. Mr. Fessenden explained that the amounts were already due, and debts must be paid. The army was largely increased since the last estimate was made, and heavy bills were coming in every day which must be paid. The Commissary Department of Tennessee had already spent their last dollar. Mr. Hale said he should not oppose the amendment, but considered it evident that there had been gross mismanagement in the Department, and read an advertisement in the New York Herald: 'That a good looking, affable young man had just completed large Government con-tracts, and wished to become acquainted with a young lady desirous of sharing the proceeds."-That explains the matter. Mr. Howe, of Wis, (Rep.,) asked that the let-ter from the Quartermaster's Department might

Mr. Fessenden also had a letter, received this morning, which he wished read. From letter read, it appeared that the costs of raising and fur nishing the army in the Quartermaster's Depart ment was about one hundred and twenty-tw millions of dollars.

The amendment was adopted, and the bill was passed. House.-After spending some time on the Senate's amendments to the United States not bill, the House went into Committee of the Whol on the Post-Office Appropriation bill. Mr. Voorhees, of Ind., (Opp.,) argued that thi Union will be restored by and through the instrumentality of the Constitution and a strice obedience to its letter and spirit, or that it wi not be restored at all; and in this connection said that the policy of "Universal Emancipation," o "Abolition," proclaimed at the commencement of the session, could not be carried out without in tolerable bad faith to the Union men of the Nort and the South. If this was to be the policy of th Government in the prosecution of this war, the a gross deception has been practiced on all loys men, and an army has been raised by false pre tences, more flagrant than had ever before bee advanced to carry out a secret and unhallowed purpose. We must adhere to the Union as ou fathers made it, and not as capricious politician would determine. Mr. Voorhees quoted from President Lincoln's Inaugural Address and Message to show that the latter had said that he 29 30 29 30 31 neither had the power nor the inclination to interfere with slavery in the States, and that he would execute the Fugitive Slave Law. Mr. Voorhees also referred to General McClellan's ference with slavery, but with a strong hand crush out any attempts at insurrection. This was looked on as a pledge sanctioned by the Executive that the army would not trample on State Laws and States, but protect them from those who would overthew them. There was at that time no protest from Puritan lips. In support of his argument, Mr. Voorhees referred, among other things, to General Butler's conduct and to the official dispatches of Mr. Seward, in which the latter declared that whatever may become of the rebellion, it is not the purpose of the Government Northern and European News appears in its columns, to interfere with the status of a single human one, two, and three days in advance of all other pabeing in the States or Territories. Infamy, he (Voorhees) said, would rest on the men who rejected peace when they could have obtained it on terms of honor. Now let the armies advance and bring this terrible struggle to a speedy termination. Let the war be waged in the name of the Constitution, the laws, and the Union of equal and honored members, and in the name of God, guided by an enlighted christianity. Mr. Washburne, of Illinois, (Rep.) the gentleman (Voorhees) had announced that the people of Indiana were ready to compromise with rebels, but he (Washburne) wished to remark that KER's a great variety of WOOD AND WILLOW the people of Illinois were ready to compromise WARS. mediate surrender." [Applause.]

Mr. Voorhees wished to explain, but Mr. Shel-laberger, of Ohie, (Rep.,) at the time having possession of the floor, and the Committee rising, he was unable to do so. The House again went into Committee of the Whole, laying saide the Post Office bill, and taking up the Senate's amendments to the Army

Mr. Richardson, of Ill., (Opp.,) said that the annunciation made by his colleague (Washburne) a short time ago was a most deightful sign.

Mr. Stevens, of Pennsylvania, (Rep.)—I hope the gentleman (Richardson) does not expect me to yield the floor for general debate. This bill passed without delay.

has endorsed General Grant.

Mr. Washburno Tes, sir.

Mr. Richardson One of the most sensible proclamstions was issued by Gen. Grant when he entered Paducah. The General then made use of the following language:

"I have not come to fight opinions, but to resist treason and overwhelm it. I am for sustaining the Constitution and the supremacy of

Mr. Richardson said that he wished this pro-clamation could be writen in letters of gold on the sky, that everybody might see the correct doc-trine. There never would have been an army of 600,000 men raised if the object had been avow-ed to overthrow the Constitution and create another Government. The war never would have been begun but for two elements at the North— namely, the Abolition party and the party headed by Buchanan, Tousey, and Cushing, and that class of men. The latter were worse than the Abolitionists, because they were smart.

These and other remarks of Mr. Richardson occasioned much laughter.
The Senate's amendments to the army bill were read, and when the committee rose they were all concurred in. Adjourned.

ANOTHER PRESSURE ON MCCLELLAN. -By a Washington letter, of February 20th, we learn the following:

Washington city is filled with rumors respect-ing the disposition of the rebels to evacuate Ma-nassas. It is said that the trains are busily in motion sending troops not only down to Richmond, but farther south to a point in North Carolina, where it is supposed General Burnside intends to strike. If this evacuation is taking place it will necessarily be slow work. It is estimated here that with the utmost activity on the part of the rebels they cannot transport their army and stores to Richmond in less than three weeks, and even then much of their bulkiest baggage would neces. sarily be lost. A pressure has been brought to bear upon General McClellan to advance impraedistely, if for no other purpose than to as sure himself that the rebels are not really fiveing away. It is felt that he cannot afford to have the same accident happen to him that occurred to Gen. Buell at Bowling Green.

Thirteen Yankee prisoners escaped from the jail at Columbia, C. S., last week.
