SATURDAY MORNING, APRIL 19, 1862,

RUSSELL'S LAST LETTER TO THE LON-

WASHINGTON, March 1 -- Well, wears not engaged in civil war in England, and we cannot judge very well what we might do if we were; otherwise there are things being done here which might be criticised.

Here, for instance, is a movement of troops going on from Washington to Baltimore and darper's Ferry, the news of which would ani-mate the North and strengthen them very madon't know of it quite as well as if all the news were published? Why, Maryland is full of secessionists; Baltimore is, perhaps, as full of Confederates as Nashville was. By whatever means newspaper intelligence could have been conveyed to their friends can also be carried the results of eyesight and hearing. So fearful are the authorities of the animosity of their opponents, that they do not venture to leave a furlong of the railway unguarded. As I came down the line this even-ing there were heavy trains filled with soldiers moving to Baltimore, and at the station others were drawn up, crammed with men. Caissons and artilery were shunned in the sidings. All the way to Washington, in addition to the numerous small pickets posted with blazing watch-fires in front of their tents, patrols were moving up and down, and a chain of sentries was established to prevent any evil minded secessionists from meddling with the rails.

THE COLUMN OF GENERAL BANKS. The passage of Banks's column was effected in very good order, and without any difficulty, and he has now upwards of 35000 men in position and in support about Charlestown and Harper's Ferry, with a numerous artillery and guns, and men fast coming up to his assistance in case of need, or with the view of enabling him to complete his portion of the plan of the advance which has now been determined upon. Gen. McClellan camps, I cannot tell what changes have really taken place, though I hear that Heintzelman, who occupies the left of the Federal line in front of Alexandria, and Fitzjohn Porter, who lay almost on the right of the winter cantonments of the army of the Potomac towards Vienna, have moved their divisions.

It is hoped that these demonstrations may shake the enemy's line, and induce him to move out from his supposed strongly fortified lines near Centreville. He certainly cannot suffer the Manassas railroad to fall into the hands of the Federals without much inconvenience. The roads are now frozen hard, but a thaw will turn them into mud, and snow, a fall of which seems imminent. will render them still less adapted for the movement of troops. There is much dispute respecting the strength of the Confederates at Centreville, and it would surprise me to hear that they had really 75,000 effective men along that portion of their very long line of defence. It argues singular confidence in their present officers to let Beauregard and Sidney Johnston go so far away; would, no doubt, hasten from Richmond, as he likely, however, that a similar movement in all respects will be made by the Federals. "THE UNION SENTIMENT OF THE SOUTH."

By-the-by, that "strong Union sentiment" which flamed out so suddenly in Tennessee seems dying out without much splutter. Commodore Foote will, no doubt, rekindle it with his fleet of motar vessels, which are to move down as soon as the land forces under Grant are ready to cooperate. The United States have now no less than fifty-one 13 inch mortars of the beaviest kind affoat on board as many mortar vessels, and they are daily adding to those terrible means of getting back States and cities into the Union.

THE POSSESSION OF TENNESSEE TO BE DISPUTED. - The Confederate Government is by no means prepared to yield Tennessee. It is true, Nashville has gone, and the Cumberland river is in Federal hands, and the Tennessee river is almost theirs, but the Confederate Government has called out twenty-two regiments in the State itself, and West Tennessee is loval to the core to the cause of secession. The defence increases in desperation as the Federals gain ground.

ABOUT THE SURRENDER OF FORT DONELSON. The surrender of Fort Donelson is no exception to that remark. The causes which led to it yet remain in obscurity. General Buckner's statement, that he found himself unexpectedly in command, does not throw any light on the other circumstances which induced him to follow Mack's example at Ulm. The cause could not have been in want of ammunition nor of food. for it is said that stores of both were found inside of the works. I have spoken to an English gentleman who conversed with many of the prisoners at Chicago. They told him that fighting all day and inflicting a tremendous loss on the enemy, they lay on their arms to renew the fight. At dawn they were ordered to pile their arms by their officers. They did so without a suspicion on their minds till the 4 00 20 boxes Webb & Whit- Federals columns appeared marching into ted's celebrated TO- the works. My friend failed to discover any Union sentiment of which the Chicago papers speak among the prisoners, whom he describes ss rough, ill-clad, powerful fellows, animated by the most bitter feelings against the Yankees.

> WHAT THE UNION SENTIMENT AT THE SOUTH MEANS Meetings of cotton planters have been held with a view, it is said, to an organized incendiarism of any cotton which may be in danger of falling into the enemy's hands. However, a Federal officer who proceeded some days ago up the Tennessee river as far as Eastport, in the State of Mississipp', below Florence, declares he found "Union sentiment" strongly prevalent along the banks, and "Union sentiment" may mean twenty-five cents a pound for cotton. It is significant that he could get so far in a single gunboat, and that he could carry away unmolested a quantity of stores intended for the Confederates from Clifton, Tennessee. The attention of the Treasury and of Congress has been turned to the best mode of cultivating and rearing cotton in the parts of se-ceded States in Federal hands, and of re-open-ing trade with Southern ports. The sooner the tion he is well supported by the "so ate of the "so called" Confederate ! on last Thursday passed a resolution Government would entertain no proposition for peace founded on the exclusion from the Unfederacy of any of their States, and pledging themselves to continue the war till the invading enemy should be entirely expelled from their territories. This is the best answer which can be given to the rumors that proposals to treat had expense. This is the best answer which can be given to the rumors that proposals to treat had come in from Mr. Davis, and this measure will effectually out the ground from under the feet of the Democrate of the North, who have been dreaming of a Peace Convention, and of a reconstruction of the Union on the old basis. The nonstancy and unshaken faith of the Confederate leaders are worthy of the highest—let us not say a better—causa. Their soldiers are ill clad and badly armed. They are not well fed, and as to the state of supplies, read this:

Gold commanded a premium of 40 to 50 per cent., and silver 36 to 40 per cent. in Richmond.

terially; but it is matum prohibitum to say a word about it, lest the news should reach the enemy. And does any one believe the enemy gallon for common and $4 for choice brands. Butter was worth $250, per pound; and sole leather 75c. a pound; call—skins $55 a dozen. Apples in the Richmond market, commanded $15 a bar-

However, the dollars are in paper. We don't know what we may come to in paper currency yet, although France is alive after a paper age in which a man had to pay 1,000f (assignats) for a decent dinner, and half the the United States exists after an intancy sustained on paper currency which is not liquidated to this day. The Confedates are about to appoint a General Commanding-in Chief; they are creating a navy—where, how, or from what, is beyond our ken; and the President boasts that he has four hundred battalions in the field, with proportionate forces of cayalry and artillery. Mr. Davis inveighs strongly against short-term enlistments, which have impaired their ability for successful defence; and as the Southern papers certain many advertise-ments for substitutes at sums varying from $50 to $1,000,it is probable the new levies called for by the different States, which are said to be in course of organization, are pressing hardly on the population. There is, amid all the distress and discomfiture of the South, no sign of repentance, submission or fear, any more than there is on the part of the North any token of weariness, relaxation or infirmity of purpose. If a correspondent could multiply himself at this moment he would be exceedingly useful, as the American papers are now forbidden to publish any news relating to the war. except that of such accomplished facts us the Gov-ernment may please to communicate; but as Washington is the centre of the most authentic information, and as it will be close to, in all probability, the great battle that is to be fought, it is better for me to remain here than go on uncer-tain missions with expeditions in the West, and in the interior, where the telegraph will far anti-cipate written dispatches, if, indeed, the atter ever reached you at all.

THE STEAMER NASHVILLE.

The Northern papers are much exercised in consequence of the escape of the steamer Nashville from Beaufort. The Philadelphia Inquirer has some "spirited remarks" on the subject, and a "Patriot c Lady," in the same journal, says :-

"By allowing the Nashville to escape the blockade, we have exposed ourselves to the ridicule of the civilized word. We sent the Tuscarora across the ocean in pursuit of her; watched her for a long time on the English coast, and then allowed her not only to run into Beaufort with her cargo of rifles, but to escape the second time with a cargo of cetton. What an encouragement to but General Smith is highly spoken of, and, be-sides, Mr. Jefferson Davis is within call, and the blockade! * * * We have exposed ourselves to contempt and derision. While the did before, in case of another attack. It is not | Nashville lay at Besufort, that was the most important point to be guarded south of the Chesa. peake; and our whole country will rise up in indination at the wretched mismanagement of the blockade. No sufficient excuse can be offered."

Thus speaks an indignant and strongminded female of Philadelphia. The following is an extract from a New York letter in a Baltimore

"It is the prevailing opinion among the shipping merchants here, that the rebel steamer Nashville, before proceeding to England with her cargo of cotton, would put into Bermuda for coal though some of them are afriad that she has gone on a cruise to the West Indies, in which case, if she is well armed, she is likely to fall in with many prizes, as there are at least thirty yessels now on their way here from ports this side of the Spanish Main. "The fact that she has cotton on board, however, is at war with this theory, there being no market in that quarter for 'the King.' The un-derwriters think we shall first hear of her at Southampton. The report brought by the empire City, by the way, that the Nashville was still lying in Beaufort harbor, must be all nonsense, as we have the testimony of officers on board both the blockading vessels Cambridge and Gemsbook, that they saw the vessel go out. The Cap-tain of the Empire City had no other authority for his statement than a rumor current at Newbern when he left."
