On his arrival he is ustered into the presence of pirate Semmes, who receives him in the most pompous and overbearing manner. He is questioned as to the name of the ship, where from, where bound, and the chraacter of his cargo. Capt. Hagar, in reply to the latter question, said that some of his cargo was on English account. On his giving this reply Semmes scowled at him and remarked, "Do you take me for a d-d fool? Where are the proofs that part of your cargo is on English account."

The papers, unfortunately, not having the Consular seal attached, were not considered proof, and the Brilliant and her cargo were in consequence seized by Semmes as a prize.

PERSONAL APPEARANCE OF SEMMES.

Capt. Hagar says that, however much Semmes may have had the appearence of a gentieman when an officer of the United States Navy, he has entirely changed now. He sports a huge moustsche, the ends of which are waxed in a manner to throw that of Victor Emanuel entirely in the shade, and it is evident that it occupies much of his attention. His steward waxes it every day carefully, and so prominent is it that the sailors of the Alabama term him "Old Beeswax." His whole appearance is that of a corsair, and the tranformation appears to be complete from Commander Ralphael Semmes, United States Navy, to a combination of Lafitte, Kidd, and Gibbs, the three most notorious pirates the world has ever known.

The officers of the Alabama are reported as very dainty gentlemen. In plundering a ship they take nothing but articles that suit them. If an effort was to be made. It will be remembered that some time ago Butler issued an order requiring all persons in the city above the age of eighteen years to report themselves to the Yankee officers of his appointment, and to register their names in a book prepared for the purpose, together with a list of all real and personal property. Those who acknowledged their allegiance to the Yankee Government and took the oath to support it, Were to be regarded as repentant rebels for whose pardon the moral courage to adhere to their convictions, and to take the risk of imprisonment and confiscation of property.

THE DUEL AT CHARLESTON.

The late fittal duel at Charleston, S. C., resulting in the death of Col. W. R. Calhoun, of the lat Reg't S. C. Artillery, at the hands of Maj. Alfred Rhett, of the same regiment, did not obtain much publicity through the papers of that city. A correspondent of the Mobile Advertiser, writing from Charleston, says it is to be the subject of legal investigation, the first case of that kind in the city courts for twenty years. The etter says :

Besides the principals and their surgeons, it is aid there were six gentlemen present at the meeting-three State Senators, the Speaker of the House of Representatives of North Carolina, a leading member of the State Convention, and a Captain. Two of the Senators also hold commissions as officers of the army. The arrangement of the meeting were conducted throughout with the nicest regard for the etiquette of the "code," and I have heard of several of those who were on the ground who express their belief that a more fairly-fought duel never occurred. Major Rhett the challenged party, waived the "drop" shot, which he preferred, and shot the "rise." He was dressed in full uniform; Col. Calhoun in citizen's dress. Both fired almost simultaneously, Major Rhett in an instant after Col. Calhoun. The latter missed and fell with a ball through the midele of his body. He survived only about an hour. The quarrel which led to this unfortunate result is said to have had its origin as long ago as April. 1861, at the time of the bombardment of Fort Sumter, in what Major Rhett considered repeated official trespasses of his inferior officer. These led to the use, on his part, of offensive language; and the repetition since of these alleged trespasses, and the offensive words by which they were met, have aggravated and complicated the affair. No explanation was asked or given. The immediate cause of meeting was a recent duel between Maj. Rhett and a friend of Col. Calhoun, who though aware of the existing difficulty, had enlogized Col. Calhoun in the presence of Maj. Rhett. Therefore, Maj. Rhett repeated his pregious denunciation of Col. Calhoun, which the friend of the latter resented as an insult to himsel; and demanded satisfaction. In this first duel Maj. Rhett received two fires of his adversary, he himself firing his second shot in the air. Here the meeting ended. In both duels Major Rhett was peremptorily challenged. It is said that in the latter affair it was proposed on the part of the challenger that firing in the air should not be allowed. .
