

DEVOTION. I never could find a good reason Why sorrow unbidden should stay, And all the bright joys of life's season Be driven unheeded away. Our cares would wake no more emotion, Were we to our lot but resigned, Than pebbles flung into the ocean, That leave scarce a ripple behind.

The world has a spirit of beauty, Which looks upon all for the best;
And while it discharges its duty, To Providence leaves all the rest. That spirit's the beam of devotion,

Which lights us through life to its close,
And sets like the sun in the ocean, More beautiful for then it rose.

LIFE AND PEOPLE AT THE BER-MUDAS.

The Bermudas, named from Juan Bermudas, are thus described in a letter from Mr. Foote to the Buffalo Commercial Advertiser : Great Britian has neglected nothing to increase their natural strength, and make the islands perfectly secure as a naval station. Every height or projecting headland is fortified and bristles with cannon ; but the reef that encircles the whole group at the distance of from one to ten or more miles, constitutes their real substantial defence. There is but one entrance within this reef, practicable for sea going vessels, and even when within, if the buoys marking the channel were removed, a vessel, unless enjoying the advantages of the very best pilotage, would almost inevitably strike on some sharp coral bank. As it is, no one ever thinks of taking in a vessel in the night.

Ireland's Island is a mass of soft white limestone, with an area of perhaps fifty or seventy five acres, the whole of which is nearly covered with barracks for the troops, governmental offices and storehouses, and a few shops and dwellings houses. A mole, beautifully made of the limestone, about one thousand feet in length and a hundred yards or so from the shore, makes a small harbor, within which lies, the hulk for the convicts pointed out. All that is necessary is to wait The precise number of the convicts now here, I could not learn; but there are probably and then cast the book before him. It mata pretty easy time. These they sell slily to visiters at a Strict discipline is maintained; and the utmost vigilance is at all times observed Some months ago, when Mitchell, the Irish patriot, was tions of what is due to the freedom of opinhere, and there was insune talk in the States ion and the rights of individuals as well as about rescuing him-a job that would have proved about as possible as sculling a boat up Niagara Falls-the guns were all shotted and manned, with fires lighted, ready for instant service if needed, on the approach of any vessel in the offing. Defended as the Bermudas are by nature and high art, they may be considered almost impregnable.-Fortunately, war between the U. States and England is an almost impossible event, but if, by any misfortune, it should occur, these islands would be a perfect horner's nest to us. With the exception of St. Helens, they are more isolated, that is, further removed from any other land, than any spot on the globe. The nearest land is Cape Hatteras. which is five hundred and eighty miles dis-

The precise number of islands and islets composing the group has never been distinct ly known, but is popularly said to be three hundred and sixty-five. Many of them, of course, are nothing but mere points of rock, a few yards square. Bermuda, the principal island, is some six or eight miles long, with an average breadth of perhaps a mile. The chief town or capital of the group, Hamilton, is on this island. We ran up to it, about six miles from our anchorage, the day after we arrived. The boats in use here are of a very peculiar construction, built of cedar, exceedingly light and buoyant, excellent sea-boats and sail like witches. The run up to Hamilton was delightful. The morning had been very warm, thermomenter at 80° in the shade. but about 9 o'clock a fresh breeze sprung up, bringing with it light fleecy clouds, covering the whole group and the encircling reef as it a vast pavilion had been specially raised, and radiant at times with the most gorgenus colors, as the sun's rays were refracted by the masses of vapor.

The island, as we sped merrily up the sound, was dotted all over with neat houses, all built of the soft limestone, and all, with scarcely an exception, of the most intense, brilliant white, even to the roofs, which were composed of thin slabs of stone. Some of these houses in the vicinity of Hamilton. embowered in shade, would be considered charming villas in any country. We drew up by the side of a low stone structure about fifteen yards square, and here our driver told us was the pond. On the other side of the road the tiny waves of a shallow cover were leaving a light line of foam almost against our carriage wheels. A man came out of a neighoring house, unlocked a door in the wall, and we entered. Within the enclosure was a bole in the rock about thirty feet long by tweaty wide, and twenty of thirty feet deep. Into this hole the sea found its way by fissure in the rock, and this was the famous pond. The water was clear as crystal, and floating in it were eight hundred groopers, from five to fifteen pounds' weight each. The average, I should think, was not far from eight pounds. They rose to the rim of their cup, and with prominent, codfish-like eyes and open mouths garnished movements. If one of our party made a splash in the water with his land, instead of retreating, the fish would make a dash to seize his fingers. One gentleman drew out a fish that would weigh ten pounds, that had seized the crooked handle of his cane .-
