PUBLISHED SEMI-WEEKLY AND WEEKLY,

The following lives are touchingly beautiful. We have seen nothing of late that has so moved our sympathy. The man wha writes such poetry, she has such thoughts, cannot be utterly depraved. The course of intemperance, with its stending downward influence, has here done its work, and a spirit noble and generous, that might nicial circle, is now the degr.ded convict in the walls of a penitentiary. How will that fond mother's heart bleed, if she shall hear of her darling boy, the inumate of a prison in a foreign land?

[From the Ohio State Journal.] THE CONVICT TO HIS MOTHER.* I've wandered far from thee, mother, Far from my happy home ; I've left the land that gave me birth. In other climes to roam;

And time since then has rolled its years And marked them on my brow, Yet I have often thought of these I'm thinking of thee now.

I'm thinking on the day, mother, When at my tender side, You watched the dawning of my youth, And kissed me to your pride ; Then brightly was my heart lit up With hopes of luture joy, While your bright fancy honors wove To deck thy darling boy.

I'm thinking of the day, mother, When with such anxious care, You lifted up your heart to heaven-Your hope, your trust was there; Fond memory brings thy parting words, While tears stole down your check : Thy long, last, loving look, to'd more Than ever words could speak.

I'm far away from thee mother. No friend is near me now, To south me with a tender word Or cool my burning brow ; The dearest ties affection wove, Are all now torn from me ; They left me when the trouble came, They did not love like thee.

I'm lonely and forsaken now, Unpitied and unblest, Yet still I would not have thee know How sorely I'm distressed : I know you would not chide, mother, You would not give me blame, But sooth me with your tender words, une hope again.

then instantly announced his text from the Book of Revelations-"Behold ! I make all things new." Without preface or apology -those flimsy crutches of lame preachershe pierced at once into the heart of his subject, and then took wings and role away on a whirlwind of fiery words. His voice, from the commencement, rolled, and pealed, and rang like the beautifully modulated music of some wondrous organ, alternating with crashes of tremendous power that seemed to jar the walls of the building as if an avalanche were rushing out of the clouds. Now it sunk to a wild wail, mellow and plaintive as a fuand should be the pride and ornament of the meral chime; again it swelled to the stcarly roar of a hurricane, if a hurricane indeed could be attuned to such octaves of harmony; and then it would break out in successive thunder-claps, causing the very bair to rise on the hearer's head, and the warm marrow to creep, as it were, in his bones. The effect was aided, too, by the orator's gesticulation-now graceful as the iry circles of a butterfly in the air ; and anon, grand to sublimity, and urgent as the swoop of the cagle climbing the heights of the storm-cloud .---His eye-at the outset, as we have said, dim and dreamy-now burned, and flashed, and lightened, till, aided by the illusions of fancy and the scene, it appeared to dart arrows of flame around the a-sembly.

As the mighty magician went on, the entire multitude seemed charged with electricity. Here and there single individuals began to rise involuntarily to their feet; then others rose by twos and threes; and next a dozen sprang up together; and finally, the whole living, throbbing, enthusiastic mass might be seen standing as one man, with fixed, straining eye-balls, devouring the speaker with a gaze, with half parted lips, and teeth clenched by attention. The excitement was measureless, and yet too profound for any species of utterance. Not a sigh, not a whisper was heard. Nothing could be heard save the voice of the orator ; and during the intervals of his pauses the fall of a pin would have been audible.

His subject, too, was unique as his manner. Ilis theme was-"The future elernity of matter; its natural capacity for indefinite and glorious changes; and the possible splendor of the new heavens and earth" His method of discussion was purely rational and scientific--that is to say, by analysis. A few of his minitable touches linger in my recollection to the present hour. He inferred the beauty of which all, even the coarsest matter is capable, from the following illus-

Oh ! I have wondered far, mother, Since I deserted thee, And left thy trusting heart to break, Beyond the deep blue sea , On! mother, still love thee well, And long to hear thee speak, And feel again thy baluty breath Upon my care worn cheek.

But, ah ! there is a thought, mother, Pervades my beating breast. That thy freed spirit may have flown To its eternal rest : And while I wipe the tear away, There whispers in my ear A voice that speaks of fleaven and thee, And bids me seek thee there. BASCOM'S ELOQUENCE. It was a day of exceeding beauty, that last Sunday in May, 1832-a day of soft baliny air, and sun-shine bright and glorious as the smile of a God. Before ten o'clock every pew and every seat in the spacious church was filled to overflowing. The whole population of Lawrencebo:ough, a lovely little town on the Ohio river, in Indiana, appeared to have turned out to hear "the great orator" from Lexington, whose fame had travelled in advance of his coming. It was his first visit to that State, and hence the general anxiety to witness his effort. All eyes were sunbursts of eloquence delivered in his peturned to the door, and (as the winged minutes flew away) with many signs of disappointment, as no one entered to answer the very circumstantial description of his person which had the previous day been published in the papers.

The hour of eleven arrived, and the wellknown parson of the station began the devotional exercises by singing and prayer. At this the tokens of vexation increased with all, and with a portion of the audience, so far as to amount to positive rudeness .--"What !" they whispered to each other half aloud, "is it only old Allen Wiley who is going to hold forth after all ?"

At length the prayer was ended, and Parson Wiley resumed his seat, when a form, hitherto concealed by the mahogany front of the pulpit, suddenly emerged from behind it, and stood for more than two minutes erect, silent, and motionless as a statue. At this apparition every individual in the immense throng started, and every heart thril. led with a nameless emotion--it so struck the sense, and there was such eloquence in his attitude, his immobility, nay, in his very tereburg. silence.

He urged the same view by another example still better adapted to popular apprehension.
