(From the Knickerbocker Magazine.)
THE OLD MILL.
Don't you remember, Lily dear,
The mill by the old mill side, Where we used to go in the summer time And watch the foamy tide?
And the leaves of the fragrant beach,
On its breast so smooth and bright, Where they floated away like emeralds,
In a flood of golden light?
Lily, dear,
And the miller, too, with his slouchy cap,
And eyes of mildest gray, Pleading about his dusty work, Singing the live-long day?
And the oat that hung on the rusty nail,
With many a motley patch,
And the rude old door, with its broken latch,
And the string, and the wooden latch?
Lily, dear,
And the water-wheel, with its giant arms, Dashing the beaded spray,
And the weeds it pulled from the sand below,
And the sleep, Lily, with moss o'ergrown, Like sentinels stood in pride, Breathing the waves, where the chinks of time Were made in the old mill's side.
Lily, dear,
Lily, the mill is torn away,
And a factory, dark and high, Looms like a tower, and puffs its smoke Over the clear blue sky;
And the stream is turned away above,
And the bed of the river bare,
And the bench is withered, bough and trunk,
And stands like a spectre there—
Lily, dear,
And the miller, Lily, is dead and gone!
I see his stone in winter time, Under a drift of snow;
But now the willow is green again,
And the wind is soft and still;
I send you a sign to remind you, love,
Of him and the dear old mill.
Lily, dear.

MISCELLANEOUS.

MONEY.

"Riches are not happiness," say many old provers generally "well-to-do" in the world —granted; neither is poverty directly and absolutely misery; but if she be not, she is near akin—she is "mother of miseries," and has, in truth, as swarming and ill-favored a progeny, of all shapes and sizes, as can well be conceived, from full-grown evils down to small, petty nuisances. As it often happens, the proudest portion of her offspring are the worst to be endured. They have not the deadly stings and maddening malignancy of the elder evils, but are more fretful, teasing, irritating, and annoying; and are that sort of imps that are perpetually pestering men in maddening circumstances, or rather, on the borders or confines thereof, but whom an increasing deficiency of, and an increasing necessity for, the circulating medium, is gradually dragging down to that class of "despi-cable ragabonds," as Cooper's house-keeper calls them—the poor. Be not afraid, ye men of millions, I am not about to make any drift upon your sympathy, I am not about to attempt to draw, a la Baniam, any fearful, loathsome, haggard picture of poverty and its effects. Such pictures do little good, and much harm. They have the tendency to sear our tender callous feelings rather than excite pity, or open the well-springs of divine charity. Besides, the superlative is not my line; the positive or comparative is quite high or low enough for one who neither deals in celestial bliss nor infernal woe, but am content to peddle in the small-ware of mere human troubles and inconveniences.
To want money is to want "honor, love, obedience, troops of friends;" it is to want respect and sympathy, and the ordinary courtesies of society; besides, occasionally, victuals. The possession or non-possession of it makes the difference whether life is to be a walk over a smooth, verdant lawn, amid fragrant flowers and aromatic shrubs, and all things that minister pleasure to the senses; or a wearisome up-hill journey through thorns and briars, and other disagreeable imperiments. It makes the difference whether you have to go bounding exultingly along like the free, full-blooded courser, or wend your way wearily and slow like the laden and despised pack-horse.
To want money, in a high state of civilization, is to be a kind of slave; it is, at least, to be dependent on the whims and caprices of others, instead of indulging in all the pleasant eccentricities or originalities to which your temperament may prompt you; it is to have to rise soon when you wish to lie late and to go to bed early in order to be enabled to do so; it is to have to eat indiscriminate provender, instead of making a judicious selection from the "delicious juices of meats and fishes;" it is to have to live in unwholesome and antipathetic neighborhoods, and mix in daily communion with people whose ways are not your ways; it is to be a drudge, a hack, a machine, worked for the profit and advantage of others until the springs are broken; it is to be omitted in family celebrations, and from about invitational at Christmas; it is to have to put up with equivocal nods and recognitions in the streets—to have your friends look into print-shop windows as you approach, and suddenly bring their admiration of the engraver's skill to a period as soon as you have passed by; it is to feel all delicate sen-sibilities, all free generous feelings, all endured and aspiring thoughts checked and crushed within you by a petty but overbearing necessity; it is to have to suffer at our dearest misfortunes and the most compensible vexations; to have family affections and social friendships uprooted and destroyed, and to be obliged to be uncon-formably careful of coats, hats, and other habilliments. It is to live "a man forbid;" or it is to become an exile from your native land—an outcast, a wanderer in foreign and unwholesome climates, hunting for the yellow indispensable, until you are of the color of the metal you are in quest of; until the temper becomes sour, the feelings deadened, the Notice.

THE Undersigned, having been heretofore largely imposed upon by the presentation to him of accounts, which he had given no authority for contracting, and having promptly paid all such accounts, hereby gives notice to all persons that hereafter, as either as Trustee, Agent, Guardian, or in any other capacity, will pay no accounts of any character whatsoever, unless the same shall have been expressly authorized by him in writing. As the undersigned keeps no accounts in his own confidence, he cannot be held responsible for the same, and he is therefore, it is useless for him to say that he will pay no accounts based on alleged verbal orders.

Southern Practice, Essays on Pathology and Therapeutics, being the substance of the course of Lectures delivered by S. H. DeCoursey, M. D., Professor of the Institutes and Practice of Medicine, in the Medical College of South Carolina. 2 Vols., Octavo.
To be had at the publisher's or admission ticket into the pleasant places of God's earth—to such that is wonderful and glorious in nature, and nearly all that is rare, and curious, and enchanting in art; or if you do travel about in a small way, it is to have that most invariable, rascally, intrusive and disagreeable of all traveling companions —economy, yoked to you; to be under a continual restraint from his presence; to be unable to give your mind freely and cheerfully up to the scene before you; and in the contemplating of a magnificent view, or a piece of hoar antiquity, to have the wretch whisper in your ear the probability of your pleasurable sensations; it is to have a continual contest carried on in your senserium between pleasure and prudence; it is to submit to small inconveniences and petty insults at inns for the accommodation of travelers, whereas, above all places on earth, the men of money shine out with the most resplendent glory, and the uneducated become the most truly insignificant; it is, in fact, to have all your enjoyments diminished and annoyances aggravated, to have pleasure almost transmuted into pain, or, at least, to have "such shadow of vexation" thrown over it as materially to change its complexion; and when all is over—journey done and expenses paid—it is to feel a sort of mean repentance as you reckon up your past expenditure, and ponder over the most probable remedial ways and means for the future.

The two things most difficult of discovery next to the passage round the North pole, are talent in a poor man, and dullness in a rich one; therefore, to want money, is to want wit, humor, eloquence, in fact capacity of every kind, or, at the best, if they be not altogether denied, to have such a duty levied upon them—such an oppressive drawback—that the rich man with inferior wares is able to beat the poor one whenever they come into competition. For instance, the most casual observer of men and manners must have noticed that in company a joke from a man five of thousand pounds per annum, elicits more admiration, and produces infinitely more hilarity and good humor, than one equally good from a man worth five hundred pounds. Oh! it is perfectly wonderful, the raciness and point that an abundance of temperatures impart to a rather dull saying. Besides, a just from a man in the receipt of a cent-million income, by some strange fatality invariably changes its nature, and becomes a little better than sheer imperi-tence. It is that sort of thing which grave gentlemen and prudent matrons designate by the word "unbecoming." Now all this, though visible to the meekest capacity, might puzzle a philosopher; he would be as unable to comprehend it as the curious sympathy which evidently exists between sterling wit and superfluous cloth, that mutually assist and set off each other. Many a quaint conceit and rare piece of pleasantry has allegor-ized its effect, and fallen pointlessly in consequence of the speaker's garments not being of that texture, or possessed of that freshness, which is altogether desirable. The moral, good reader, to be deduced from all this is—that you be not petulant and acrimonious because these things are so, but that if endowed with a "money making disposition," you assiduously cultivate it, and then you will not care whether these things are so or not.

The want of money too, I am inclined to think, produces physical changes which have not as yet been sufficiently noticed by the faculty. It causes a gradual and considerable accumulation of bile, which lies lurking in the system, until the incivilities of friends or the importunities of creditors, cause it to become completely vitiated or inspissated; after which a man, especially one predisposed to melancholy and contemplation, looks at every thing on earth through a pair of yellow spectacles. The unhappy patient becomes saturated, body and mind, with jaundice; he shuns the society of his fellow men, butions his coat up to his chin, pulls his hat over his eyes, deposits his hands in the pockets of his small clothes, and takes extraordinary long walks into the country—But even the fair face of nature becomes changed; the barrenness of his pockets throws a corresponding sterility over the landscape, deducting "the glory from the grass and splendor from the flower." The blossoming of the earth is no longer pleasant to his sight, or the music of the merry warblers of the woods delightful to his ear.
His "heart is out of joint," and all nature seems to be filled with unexpressed comparisons between his own state and hers. He stalks about with lowering brow and upturned lip, in unpleasant discord amid the universal harmony and fitness of things. At this juncture, let intelligence arrive of a heavy legacy left him by some appropriately defunct distant relative—and lo! the change!
It is as a dark cloud passing from the sun.
Monsieur II Penseroso becomes I Allegro in a twinkling. He draws his hands from the extensive vacuum in which they have been dangling, takes the yellow spectacles from his eyes, raises his hat from his brow, unbuttons his coat, and turns, with a feeling of leisurely enjoyment, to welcome the fresh spring breeze. The song of birds, and the odor of flowers, are again grateful to his senses. The rivulet tinkles once more pleasantly in his ear, and the cheerful song of the lark finds a corresponding echo in his own bosom. He indulges no longer in speculations on the vanity and insufficiency of things, but hies homeward cheerful, free, unfranchised, independent. He orders an approved cookery book, lies a-bed and studies it, and utters, in short time, how melancholy ever gained a footing in this mightily pleasant world. Oh money, money! marvellous indeed are the changes thou canst produce. Would that I were a bank director!

OFFICERS OF THE N. C. VOLS.
ATTENTION!!

YOUR attention is called to the fact, that an attempt is being made by our brethren of other States, to obtain an act of Congress granting Land Warrants to the Volunteer Officers, who served in the late war. By every rule of justice it is our right—and I have advice which leads to the belief that it will be granted by Congress, if concert of action is had on the subject.
I have been requested by many Officers to call for the voice of all our brethren on the subject—and know no better way than to address you through the newspapers.
It would undoubtedly be a source of great pleasure to all, could we meet once more, and I suggest that the officers from every part of the State communicate through the press, and thus obtain an expression of opinion in the premises.

Caldwell Institute,
HILLSBOROUGH, N. C.

THE next session of this institution will commence on Thursday the 11th of July.
It has been deemed advisable, in order to meet the wants of young men who do not desire to graduate in any college, to introduce a more popular course of Natural Philosophy, and devote more time to Practical Mathematics than is usual in Schools or Colleges. To effect this it has been determined to lay aside Analytical Geometry, to extend the course to Surveying and Mensuration, and introduce Practical Astronomy.
The next session is the regular time for a class to commence the study of Latin.
It is very important for all students to be present at the beginning of the session.
Any further information relating to the school can be had by applying to the President, the Rev. A.
Wilson, D. D.
By order of the Board of Trustees,
J. W. NORWOOD, Secretary. 47 3t

Notice.

NOTICE is hereby given, that an application will be made to the next Legislature of North

Notice.

[From the Opera of the "two SUIT-ors."] Translated on Fayetteville Street.
I dreamed that her favoring glances fell On a well-dressed Beau at her side, And I could not tell why the laughing Belle, Laid her hand on my neck and my side,
But a single glance at my rival's Coat, Told me there lay the strength of the game;
And I said if the Tailor's Town who can do it, I'll have one exactly the same.
Then I dreamed that I searched the Town all o'er,
For the gem that would win her heart, Till I found myself standing in front of the Store Where clothing is fashioned by art;
And then I remembered that this was the place Where the Coat of my rival was made,
And entering in, right before my face, Lay a Broad-Cloth, exactly the shade, I found myself standing in front of the Store I came, and I saw, and I won For she smilingly said, when I asked her to wed, "What an elegant Coat you have on!"
Three days from that time, perhaps it was more, I induced her to alter her name;
I still find my Coat at the very same Store,
And she loves me as ever the same.

Spring and Summer Goods
For 1850.

R. Tucker and Son,
WHO constantly keep on hand an extensive assortment of the best and most desirable, as well as fashionable
FANCY AND STAPLE DRY GOODS,
are now receiving their Spring and Summer supply for 1850. One of the Firm has just returned from New York, where he purchased a rich variety of Goods of this Spring's Importations, before they had been picked over, and before the advance in price;
and having thus had the choice of the large and splendid fresh arrivals, and the advantage of low prices, they flatter themselves they will be better prepared than ever to meet the demands of this market, and please their numerous friends and customers, in low and country. They respectfully invite the public to call and examine their stock. They have just received a supply of the following, and are daily receiving such other articles as are usually kept in a Dry Goods and Family Grocery Store, suited to the wants and taste of this community.
Black and Figured Cashmere Silks, Broche and Plain Grenadines,

For 1850.

R. Tucker and Son,
assortment of the best and most desirable,
as well as fashionable
are now receiving their Spring and Summer supply
for 1850. One of the Firm has just returned from New York, where he purchased a rich variety of
been picked over, and before the advance in price;
prices, they flatter themselves they will be better
kept in a Dry Goods and Family Grocery Store,
suited to the wants and taste of this community.
