POETRY.

The following beautiful and touching little poem by Mrs. Lowell, (wife of the poet,) contains a lesson of consolation which will win its way to many a bereaved and bleeding heart. It was addressed to a female friend, who had been called upon to give up a loved and cherished babe, ' to darkness and the worm,' and we present it to all sorrowing parents in the confident hope that its simple and pathetic admonitions will not be unacceptable :

When on my ear your loss was knelled, And tender sympathy upburst, A little rill from memory swelled, Which once had soothed my bitter thirst :

And I was fain to bear to you Some portion of its mild relief, That it might be as healing dew To steal some fever from your grief,

After our child's untroubled breath Up to the Father took its way, And on our home the shade of death Like a long twilight haunting lay :

And friends came round with us to weep Her little spirit's soft remove, This story of the Alpine sheep Was told to us by one we love;

They in the valley's sheltering care, Soon crop the meadow's tender prime, And when the sod grows brown and bare The shepherds strive to make them climb

To airy shelves of pasture green That hang along the mountain side, Where grass and flowers together lean, And down through mist the sunbeams slide.

But naught can tempt the timid things That steep and rugged path to try. Though sweet the shepherd calls and sings, And seared below the pastures lie,

Till in his arms their lambs he takes, Along the dizzy verge to go, Then, heedless of the rifts and breaks, They follow on, o'er rock and snow.

And in those pastures litted fair, More dewy soft than lowland mead. The shepherd drops his tender care, And heep and lambs together feed.

This parable by nature breathed, Blew on me as the South wind free. O'er frozen brooks that float unsheathed From icy thraldom to the sea.

A blissful vision, through the night, Would all my happy senses sway Of the good shepherd on the height, Or climbing up the stony way.

Holding our little lamb asleep : And like the burthen of the sea, Sounded that voice along the deep, Saying, ' Arise and follow me.'

DEATH OF THE PRESIDENTS. GEORGE WASHINGTON died at his own home-the place made illustrious by his association with it. There, where he had ever gone with such eager enjoyment of its employments-more prized and valued than place or power-there, where pilgrims, even while he lived, had gone from all parts of the realms of civilization, that they might know and converse with the greatest and best :constantly coming to him from the people, he met the arrow of death. It came sud decease and his sickness came simultan. er dies. cously to the halls of Congress.

All of which he saw, and part of which he was, The fourscore years and ten-beyond that verge of old age which comes "by reason of strength"-was a time of usefulness. He remembered what had gone before, and by its light illustrated, to those who were so fatored as to enjoy his converse, his Present. On the most memorable day of that month, July, which has proved so fatal to presidential life, he died-realizing what day it was, and rejoicing in it. It was in this great city, amidst the "pomp and circumstance" of a civic celebration of the nation's birthday, that the patriot, JAMES Misses and childrens Bleck Morroco Bootes, MONROE, breathed his last. The roar of the rejoicing cannon-the manifestation that the men of the Revolution were rememberedrung in his dying ear. He had been one of them. He had enjoyed the confidence of the Father of his Country. "I will send Mr. Monroe," said Washington to that famous Committee of the Democratic party, who called on him respecting the vacant embassy to France. And, who will-who can ever forget the death of brave Old Tippecanoe? He who had by valor and fidelity, by doing courageously and honestly all his duty, found such a home in the people's heart, that the herculean effort of desperate party machinery could not remove him thence. He who, in faithfulness to his principles and his friends, and candor and courtesy to his opponents, conducted a canvass of such vigor as the like never before was seen, and has not since been experienced. He who, after winning and wearing the laurels of the proudest triumph that ever a civic contest afforded, vielded to the destroyer. Even yet it is vivid in our memories, of the intensity of feeling with which the news of his illness was watched, as it came (with a laggard step which would now be unendurable) day by day, and of the tears that fell from "eyes unused to weep," when the man that never Store lost a battle, left this world of uncertain happiness and most certain grief. TRICOPHEROUS Or Medicated Compound. NFALLIBLE for renewing, invigorating and beautifying the hair, removing scurt, dandruff, and all affections of the scalp, and curing eruptions on the skin, diseases of the glands, muscles and integuments, and relieving stings, cuts, bruises, sprains &c., &c. With this preparation "there is no such word as full." The first journals in America, medical men of the highest emmence, prominent citizens of all professions, and ladies who have used it for years in their dressing rooms and nurseries, admit with one accord, that, for imparing vigor, glees, luxuriance and curl to the hair eradicating scurf and dandruff, healing wounds, curing contusions, sprains stings. &c., and relieving direases of the skin, the glands and the muscles, it has no equal among the multitude of compounds advertised in the public prints, or used in private practice. In cheapness as well as efficacy, Barry's Tri, opherous is unrivalled The immense cash sales of the article have enabled the inventor to supply it at retail at twenty five cents per boule, which is from fifty to one hundred per cent less than the prices of any other preparament now in use.
