MISCELLANEOUS. MICHAEL O'MALLEY'S OPINION OF

LIQUOR; OR-The difference between trust and time. "What you buy of Taylor may be freely taken on trust." — Delta > Friday.

Philologists say that words are but the signs of ideas. The above is a quotation of our words, and these words are our ideas; but they seem not to be the ideas of other fulks. Referring to an advertisement of our old friend Sewel T. Taylor, in our columns, we wrote them, meaning that the public might rely on Mr. Taylor's well known character for veracity and probity, that he offered no articles for sale which was not what he represented it to be. How very differently others construed our language, the following incident will show :

Mr. Taylor had not well got into his store on Friday morning, when an honest looking, unsophisticated Irishman entered, and after making an informal obeisance, said-"Misther Taylor, I preshume ?"

Mr. Taylor .- Yes sir; my name is Taylor. Itishman .- I see, be the Dilta, you have got a variety of vineous—as me schoolmaster, Mike Maher, used to say-and spirituous liquors for sale.

Mr. Taylor .- Yes, sir, I have. Irishman-Might I make so bould as to ask permission to taste them. Excuse me, Misther Taylor, but it was a principle of polthought me be Father Dan O'Dunnell, niver to make a bargain with me eyes shut; niver to buy a pig in a bag. "Mick, a vick," he used to say to me—he was always mighty familiar afther taken the sixth tumbler,— "Mick, a vick, they talk, a deal about evil sperits; but they are not half so dangerous to the constitution as bad sperits that you sometimes buy at the groceries. If you want

"niver buy a dhrop, whether it be potheen or parlimint, that is not fourth proof-that, in punch, won't stand at layst two wathers to one whisky, and be of decent strength at Mr. Taylor .- Well, sir, I am satisfied of the wisdom of Father O'Donnell's advice. I have no desire to controvert it; nor do see the necessity of going to such trouble to repeat it. There is no apology necessary for tasting my liquors, when a party comes to

to preserve your constitution," he added, show Mr. What-d' you-call-him, here, any liquors be wants to see. Irishman .- I beg you to recall my cognomen, Misther Taylor. My name, paternal and sponsorial, is Misther Michael O'Malley -originally-that is, in me great grandfather's time-of O'Mallevaville, in the county of Mayo, ould Ireland, but now, of 407

Girod street, New Orleans; - at your sarvice, Mr. Taylor .- Well, then, John, take the dipper and show Mr. Michael O'Malley any liquors he wishes to see.

Mr. O'Malley .- To see! to see Misther Taylor! Why, do ye think I'm omadhawn enough to dipind on ocular demonstration for the quality o'me liquor. No, sir. I must smell it-aye, faith, and taste it too-I must feel its flavor as it goes down me throat, for as Jack Carroll, the blind piper, us'd to say, when he received a shillin', and rubbed it between his thumb and forefinger, to distinguish it from a copper ha-penny, "seein' is b'lievin', but feelin' is the naked truth." Mr. Taylor. -Do just as you please, Mr. O'Malley. John, at this time, took Mr. O'Malley under his charge, for Mr. Taylor had well nigh got tired of his loquacity; and starting bung after bung. Mr. O'Malley tasted everything in the store, from Pleur de Sillery Champagne and sparkling Hock down to Old Bourbon. and even Red Eye. This done, he again addressed himself to Mr. Taylor, saying : "Well, sur, your liquors are purty good.

I think your Champagne would be betther if it had a little more body, just like Guinness's Brown Stout, or Thunder's three-penny; and your Hock has a kind of foreign, sourkreut taste; but that, I suppose, is on account of its German origin, for I find that unlike us (Irish) it is a long time before anything German gets the native twang; but your Ould Irish Whiskey, Misther Taylor-whew didn't the very taste of it make me dhream of the ould sod ; and didn't it make me think I saw the boys and the purty colleens dancin' on the green, an' the piper fingering' his chanther like b-z-s, for them; and the whole devarsion indin' in a beautiful fightas all legitimate devarsion, conducted on the ould plan, should ind-oh! put me down for ten gallons of that-divil a dhrop less'll do."

Mr. Taylor .- Very well, sir. Any brandy? Mr. O'Malley. Of course. Though, good ts it is, it isn't equal to the ould stuff. I'll take five gallons of it, however, to threat me American frinds. They haven't advanced far enough yet in the state of progressive civilitation, to appreciate the vartues of ould frish

Mr. Taylor -Then what do you say about wine, sir. Will you take any wine?

O'Malley .- Not the first d-d dbrop. Your port I could stand if your whiskey wasn't so good. But if I was to dhrink your claret Poin' to bed. I'm afraid I might wake up parlezvousin' in the morain'. And as for your Garman wines - the only thing Garman I can abide is the Garman flute, and that, allow me yards from the Capitol, and one door to the east of to say, your humble servant, Michael O'Malley, plays with considherable musical taste. and in case the tune is an Irish melody, with tolerable artistical discrimination.

Mr. Taylor .- Then you want nothing

O'Malley .- No more at prisint from your humble sarvant, as Coun. Lynch said in ged afther.

Mr. Taylor-Your bill, sir, is $65 and drayage. [This he said, presenting Mr. O'Maliey with a piece of paper about four inches by four 1

O'Malley - Speaking in detached phraset.] Ten-fifty-five-twenty-five-tiecount for cash-received payment-Sewell T. Taylor. Looking up from his bill of parcels to Mr. Faylor, he said, interjectionally, "Cash ! received payment!" Why, Mist her Taylor, what does this mayne?

Mr. Taylor .- It means, sir, that those are my cash prices, and that in cases when I do not know the parties purchasing, the article must be paid for before leaving the store. O'Malley .- They must, eh?

Mr. Taylor .- They must, sir. O'Malley .- Well, sir, keep them till I pay for them, and if you do, I promise you your stock will niver run out. Look at that, sir ! look at that ! he said, indigenatly, drawing the Delta from his pocket, and pointing out the particular line in our editorial notice quoted bove-"what you buy of Taylor may be freely taken on trust.

There, sir, in accordance with that statement, authoritatively made, I haven't a doubt, cum here to pathronize you, I intinded to ecommend your establishment to me friends. but since you will not let me take your liquor on trust, divil a dhrop of it shall iver go down me throat. I'm dun whith you for ever. Misther Taylor.

Mr. O'Malley here left, like one whose edlings had been outraged, and the matter was a subject of laughter between Mr. Taylor and such of his friends as he related the incidest to through the day. N. O. Delta.

An elderly gentleman, accustomed to "indulge,' entered the room of a certain inn, where sat a grave friend by the fire. Lifting a pair of green spectacles upon his forehead, rubbing his inflamed eyes, and calling for hot brandy and water, he complained to his friend that this eyes were getting weaker and weaker, and even speciacles didn't seem to do them any good."

'I'll tell thee, friend, replied the Quaker, what I think, If thee was to wear thy spectacles over thy mouth for a few months, thy eyes would get round again."

REWARDING HONESTY .- A coloured servant sweeping out a bachelor's room, found sixpence on the carpet which he carried to the owner. "You may keep it for your honesty," said he. A slort time after he missed his gold pencil-case and inquired of his servant if he had seen it. "Yes, sir," was the reply. "And what did you do with it ?"-'Kept it for my honesty, sir!" The old the Fall and Winter Trade. bachelor disappeared.

Cool REPLY -An Indian prince, remarkable for his pride and ill-humour, once walking to the window of his presence chamber with a foreign ambassador, said to him-"Do you know, sir, that one of my ancestors forced purchase them. Here, John! said he, addresperson of your description from this balco ny into the street ?" "It may be so," was the reply, "but probably it was nott he fashion then, as it is now, for ambassadors to Raleigh, April 5, 1850. Sketches of North Carolina.

WORK will be published by the undersigned this Spring, entitled as above, giving as accurate account of each County in our State, Alphabetical order, the derivation of its name, date of fer-Biography of its distinguished citizens, an securate list of its representation in each branch of the General Assembly, its Towns. Rivers, Population, Re-eral Assembly, its Towns, Rivers, Population, Resources, Products, and Topography.

The undersigned has for many years been collecting and condensing the material for this work. The archives of our own State have been carefully examined, and copious extracts made from its records. He has procured from the offices of the Board of Trade and Plantation in London many valuable documents. Rare and valuable works have been purchased from abroad, touching the early history of our State, and each County, which have never seen the light. He has been kindly aided by gentlemen in different sections by copies of original documents, and faithful fraditional statements, high-light important and interesting.

that "so cerelessly has the History of North Caro-lina been written that the name, merits and end of the first Govenor is not known," is a reflection upon us. An examination of the early history of the Counties of North Carolina shows a record of the purest patriotism and indomitable course. This record is now covered by the dust of age and unknown by neglect. It is a debt which the present genera-tion owes to the past as well as the future to pretion owen to the past as well as the future to pre-serve the memorials; for it often occurs in the his-tory of our race, that facts known to one generation

This work will be illustrated with a Map of State, from latest surveys, and including the Counties to this date, and sketches in Engraving some of her beautiful scenery. It will contain a 50° pages, and be furnished at one dollar will be received and the book furn at different points of the State.
