LARGEST CIRCULATION IN THE CITY, LARGEST CIRCULATION IN THE STATE.

Thursday, December 21, 1865.

The Trail of the Serpent. On the 8th of August, 1865, the first copy of the Sentinel was issued. In an editorial upon the work of restoration, it said: "So far as North-Carolina is concerned this immense responsibility is placed upon the shoulders of Gov. Holden. Justice and right demand that he should be judged charitably and kindly, and that his hands should be held up."

With this announcement of its charitable and patriotic intentions the Sentinel began

On the succeeding day, however, it pointed out a cutain class of citizens as evil persons. And even then it began to war insidiously upon Union men. In speaking of the Convention, it said :

"That body will be composed of many cool, wise men, free from the passion of the times; but there are others guided more by the passion of revenge rather than the virtue of charity, who may seek to wreak vengeance upon those who have visited upon them po-litical or personal injury in other days."

Alas! alas! in the beginning, the Sentinel mittook the intentions of leading Union men, and charged them with dark and revengeful feelings. Is it surprising that a paper which marked certain persons at once as its foes, should not have hesitated to openly declare against them a short while after ?-But, as we see above, no names were called; it worked insidiously.

However, for the present, it appeared contented: and urged "absolute harmony in the work of re-construction." When the Standard casually spoke of the Union party in this State, it scouted the idea of there being another party, and took us to task for intimating such a thing. Poor, honest soul, the very idea of a second party in the State pained it exceedingly. Perhaps the sorrows of that hour still impress this recollection upon its memory.

On Saturday after its first issue, in which it counselled every thing good and generous, it assumed a different tone. Perhaps its talk of no party had led it to believe that we were hoodwinked. At any rate at printed the following ominous paragraph. It was apparently itching to say more. Read it:

momentary. We can well afford to remain in a chrysalis state, verging nearer and nearer every day to the hour of deliverance. The day of freedom, such as we have enjoyed is coming to us. Why delay it-why press it further from you, by ill-judged, ill-advised suggestions which avail nothing? The South is in the folds of the Anaconda. Let her be quiet, be hopeful, and these folds will relax gradually until she is free."

"Until she is free!" The Sentinel was then merely biding its time. It proffered Gov. Holden a fair and honest support, but it was only biding its time to break that promise. The past has proven it. When the folds of the Anaconda were partly loosed. it turned vengefully upon the Governor .-When the folds are entirely loosed, it will turn vengefully upon the President, for " submission is but momentary" on the part of the South. We read the future by the

Still the Sentinel did not break at this time with Gov. Holden. The conduct of the Governor extorted praise even from that print. It said on the 14th of August :

"1. It was absolutely necessary, in order to success in our restoration to the Union. that whatever plan President Johnson might adopt, should be liberally and promptly car-ried out.

2. We had no man in North Carolina whose political record and sympathies so well accorded with those of President Johnson's as those of Gov. Holden's, and none in whom the President had more confidence.

8. The history of reconstruction so far in the South, proves that none of the Provis-ional Governors so thoroughly understand the President's programme, and so fully endorse it, as Governor Holden."

Here the Sentinel distinctly endorsed the manner in which Gov. Holden was carrying out the President's programme. Gov. Shar key, of Mississippi, had taken a different course, it is true, but at that time the Sentinel preferred Gov. Holden's plan. In its eyes, it was being liberally and promptly carried out. And, strange to say, it was also opposed to secessionists and unpardoned war men taking any hand in the work of reconstruction. So excessive were its ideas of loyalty that it seriously remonstrated with them; and gave it as one of the best evidences of our people's loyalty, that secessionists and unpardoned men were not then seeking office. It said on the 15th of August :

"Now, one of the best evidences of the genuine character of the loyalty of the peoole of North-Carolina, is that in no instance do we hear of a man of that stamp putting himself forward for office, nor are the people anywhere, that we know of, disposed to demand their services for public office."

And vice versa when secessionists and unpardoned persons did begin to put themselves forward, the Sentinel began also to seriously doubt the loyalty of our people.-True it has never said so publicly. But as it always "swears to its hurt and changes not," it no doubt adheres to the belief secretly that one of the best evidences of our loyalty is now gone. We regret this unfortunate occurrence as much as the Sentinel can possible do; and heartily agree with it in the belief that the election of secessionists and unpardoned men to office has obliterated one of the best evidences of our loyalty, but ee are not responsible for such selections. In the Sentinel ? The Sentinel at that time also agreed with We hold the same doctrines now, an rnest support to President Johnson and Gov. Helden, and the selection of men for once whose Union records recommend them to the sympathies of the Northern people, and the preservation of harmony and good feelings among our own people. We have opposed rivalries for office, for we hold that such contests in our present condition benefit no one. On the 15th of August the Sentinel occupied the same ground. It said: "It will be quite time enough after she [the State] has gotten out of the difficulties with which she in environed, before she again seeks to embark in political contests and rivalries. She has at present but one end to seek, and that is the safest, smoothest and most promising road to recognition and
