

TERMS:

THE NORTH CAROLINA STANDARD published weekly at three dollars per annum...

Count Advertisements and Sheriff's Sales, will be charged twenty-five per cent. higher than the usual rates.

FROM THE RICHMOND ENQUIRER. THE REPUBLICANS OF N. CAROLINA AND VIRGINIA.

The following Address was duly reported on Tuesday night to the Democratic Association of this City, by Mr. SEDDON, from the sub-Committee to whom it had been referred...

Resolved, That the President of this Association be requested to take the most appropriate mode of transmitting this Address to the Republicans of North Carolina.

TO OUR REPUBLICAN BROTHERS IN THE STATE OF NORTH CAROLINA:

The Democratic Association of the City of Richmond, forming a portion of the great Republican family of Virginia, cannot view without profound interest the struggles of the Democracy in the other States of the Union.

We look upon you indeed as our brethren in the Republican communion. We are bound together by the same political relations. The Democrats of N. Carolina, like those of Virginia, regard the Federal Government as the creature of the sovereign States of this Union...

But it is scarcely necessary for us to specify all the points which are at issue, during the present contest. The great struggle is again between the Republican and Federal parties. The principles which were involved in the issue between Adams and Jefferson in 1800, are again at stake in the contest between Harrison and Van Buren in 1840.

We contend, therefore, as an essential proposition, that no power can be safely assumed, which is not originally conferred. None can ever be safely exercised, because the general welfare is supposed to require it.

principle to-morrow. The mass of powers, which may be illegitimately transferred to the General Government, may thus accumulate without end; and as almost every measure, which is adopted, must be carried into effect by the Executive Department; as every appropriation of money, for example, requires agents to carry it out...

The doctrine of a strict construction is, therefore, not only necessary to preserve the rights of the States, but the liberties of the People. It is this school, which constitutes the Republican party. It is the school, to which our Jefferson and our own Macon belonged.

The latitudinous school of construction, on the other hand, constitutes the Federal party. They are accustomed to interpret the charter upon much looser principles. In their eyes a Bank of the United States, a large Protective Tariff, a system of Internal Improvements...

But it is scarcely necessary for us to specify all the points which are at issue, during the present contest. The great struggle is again between the Republican and Federal parties. The principles which were involved in the issue between Adams and Jefferson in 1800, are again at stake in the contest between Harrison and Van Buren in 1840.

We appeal, then, to the citizens of the whole South. We appeal to them as patriots and as statesmen. We beg them to recollect, which candidate has been their friend and fastest friend; which of them has pledged himself to veto any anti-slavery bill which may be passed...

The appeal is then made to us, as members of the strict State Rights' Republican school. And it is particularly made to us in behalf of our own rights, and our Southern institutions.

We address you, citizens of N. Carolina, as brethren of one common country. You have the same principles, the same rights, as we have. The same genial sun shines upon both our lands. The same great Constitutional principles should light our footsteps.

Be not deceived by such artful representations, nor yield to anxious forebodings on our account. The Democratic cause prebods in every portion of our State, and those who have the best opportunity of judging, assure us that in next November the vote of Virginia will be given to Martin Van Buren.

bearance. We take the liberty of speaking to you, as to trying a crisis—We have no other organized body near us, who can speak for us—and the time is too precious for us, to wait till our Charlottesville Convention can meet and address you.

We feel authorized, also, to make you this Address, for the purpose of inviting as many of you as can attend the Charlottesville Convention of the 9th of September, to meet us on that occasion. We wish to commune with you upon our common interests—and we especially desire to profit by the excellent counsels which it will be in your power to give us.

FOR THE NORTH CAROLINA STANDARD. DINNER IN CASWELL.

Agreeably to previous arrangements, on Wednesday the 10th August, at an early hour of the day, a very large and respectable number of citizens from the counties of Caswell and Person N. C. and Halifax and Putnam Va. assembled in the town of Milton N. C.

In passing the Gate into the enclosure at the West end of the Milton Hotel, the eye was directed to a neat cluster of ornamental trees, the mingling boughs of which, under the influence of a gentle breeze, seemed for awhile to shake hands and commune together.

On the removal of the cloth and the introduction of an abundant supply of old Madeira and other choice liquors, General Barzillai Graves, the President, and Maj. Wm. A. Lea, Stephen Dodson, Jere Graves, Dr. David Pointer, Dabney Rainey, Maj. John R. Graves and Thomas J. Reed, the Vice Presidents...

The good old Republican party—they require no sacrifice of the rights of others; they ask nothing not given to them by their Creator, or secured to them by the plain meaning of our Constitution. Their cause is just; their war is defensive; and victory will prove surest when danger seems greatest.

gauge which flowed in rich sluices, well calculated to enchain an attentive audience for a great while, would be but a failure. Let it suffice to say, while on that disturbing subject, he urged the absolute necessity of clinging to our Northern Democratic friends, without whose aid, he feared, an awful dissolution would follow.

The strong and affectionate appeal from Mr. Thompson to his old acquaintances, to stand firm in the good and well tried cause of Democracy, and resist the attempts of the enemy to enlist them under the banner of the log cabin, hard cider, coon skin influence, drew from the audience loud and repeated cheers.

The good old Republican party—they require no sacrifice of the rights of others; they ask nothing not given to them by their Creator, or secured to them by the plain meaning of our Constitution.

The good old Republican party—they require no sacrifice of the rights of others; they ask nothing not given to them by their Creator, or secured to them by the plain meaning of our Constitution.

The good old Republican party—they require no sacrifice of the rights of others; they ask nothing not given to them by their Creator, or secured to them by the plain meaning of our Constitution.

The good old Republican party—they require no sacrifice of the rights of others; they ask nothing not given to them by their Creator, or secured to them by the plain meaning of our Constitution.

The good old Republican party—they require no sacrifice of the rights of others; they ask nothing not given to them by their Creator, or secured to them by the plain meaning of our Constitution.

The good old Republican party—they require no sacrifice of the rights of others; they ask nothing not given to them by their Creator, or secured to them by the plain meaning of our Constitution.

The good old Republican party—they require no sacrifice of the rights of others; they ask nothing not given to them by their Creator, or secured to them by the plain meaning of our Constitution.

The good old Republican party—they require no sacrifice of the rights of others; they ask nothing not given to them by their Creator, or secured to them by the plain meaning of our Constitution.

The good old Republican party—they require no sacrifice of the rights of others; they ask nothing not given to them by their Creator, or secured to them by the plain meaning of our Constitution.

The good old Republican party—they require no sacrifice of the rights of others; they ask nothing not given to them by their Creator, or secured to them by the plain meaning of our Constitution.

The good old Republican party—they require no sacrifice of the rights of others; they ask nothing not given to them by their Creator, or secured to them by the plain meaning of our Constitution.

The good old Republican party—they require no sacrifice of the rights of others; they ask nothing not given to them by their Creator, or secured to them by the plain meaning of our Constitution.

The good old Republican party—they require no sacrifice of the rights of others; they ask nothing not given to them by their Creator, or secured to them by the plain meaning of our Constitution.

dresses of the Federalists recommending a resort to the means which God and Nature has given them, and to open rebellion, in full view of Mr. Van Buren, should they fail at the ballot box, will be long remembered by those who so highly applauded them.

13th. The sovereign People—capable of self-government.
14th. The Rights of the States—they must be preserved.

By the Hon. William Montgomery. The honor bestowed by Mississippi upon our Democratic friend, Jacob Thompson, has been and will be amply rewarded in his able and faithful discharge of public duty.

By Richard Logan, Esq., of Virginia. The Democratic party of 1840—the legitimate descendants of the old Republican party of '98.

By Maj. Wm. A. Lea. The Democratic Republican party—actuated by purity and correctness of principle, they appeal to the judgment and not the prejudices and passions of the people.

By Col. H. Stanfield. Martin Van Buren and William Henry Harrison—the former a distinguished civilian, the latter a superannuated old man. Democrats, which will you have for President?

By Col. Paul Taylor. The Independent Treasury—the constitutional fiscal agent of the Government; every departure from it has proved deleterious to our fundamental principles, and tended to impair the interest and infringe the rights of the people.

By Col. Wm. Lea. The Hon. Richard M. Johnson—the able statesman, the pure patriot, and an honest man; may he long live to enjoy the gratitude of his country.

By Doct. Nathaniel S. L. Graves. Log cabins, coon skins, old goggles, canoes, and doggerel songs—what excellent arguments for the decent, sober, intelligent, and religious part of the American people.

By Dabney Rainey, Esq. Our Country—she may, and sometimes does, err; but ever true to herself she has ever been found prompt to retract her steps when convinced of her error.

By Doct. Weldon E. Wright. Col. Richard M. Johnson—the Hero of the Thames; may his last end be like that of his friend Jackson, full of glory.

By Tho. J. Reid. Federal stock in trade—false money, false doctrines, false speeches, false biographies, false rumors, and last, tho' not least, false heroes.

By Maj. H. Graves. The Eagle of Democracy—may it never be superseded by the Log Cabin of Federalism.

By P. I. Punch, Esq. Campaign to our real friends, and real pain to our sham friends.
By Thomas H. Benton.—The Lion of the West, when he arises and shakes his mane the animals of a lower grade cower and skulk into their holes.

By Wm. S. Belts.—The democratic party—our country's party; in supporting the re-election of Van Buren to the Presidency they prove to the world their devotion to the principles of Jefferson.

By James Murphy.—May the tomb stone of Federalism become an ascending step to the altar of freedom.
By John H. Faucett.—Caswell county, ever vigilant in the defence of national liberty.—The inroads of the enemy within the confides of her sister counties but renew her patriotic exertion in the good cause.