GLASS PEARLS, though among the most beautiful, inexpensive and common ornaments for women now made, are produced by a very singular process. In 1656, shout two hundred years ago, a Venitian, named Jaouin, discovered that the scales of a species of fish called bleak-fish, possessed the property of communicating a pearly hue to water. He found, by experiment, that beads, dipped in this water, assumed, when dried, the any carance of pearls, It proved, however, that the pearly coating, when placed outside, was easily rubbed off. and the next improvement was to make the heads hollow. The making of these beads is carried on even to this day in Venice. The heads are all blown separately. By means of a small tube the insides are delicately coutover that.
