The Wonder of the Age.
NO PAY!

IF Dr. Tobias' celebrated Venetian Liniment does not cure Cholera, Dysentery, Croup, Colic, Coughs, Dyspepsia, Vomiting, Mumps, Toothache, Headache, Chapped Hands, Cold Feet, Mosquito Bites, Insect Stings, Chronic Rheumatism, Swellings, Ulcerous Sores, Cuts, Burns, Bruises, and Pains or Weakness in the Limbs, Back and Chest.

NO HUMBUG—TRY IT.

Dr. Tobias has warranted his Liniment for eight years without ever having a demand made for the return of the money—all that is asked is to use it according to the directions.

NO ONE WILL EVER BE WITHOUT IT

After once using it. If you do not find it better than anything you have ever tried before.

GET YOUR MONEY RETURNED.

Thousands of Certificates have been received speaking of its rare virtues. Now a days it is the practice to fill the papers with certificates from unknown persons, or given by those who have never used the medicine—now Dr. Tobias offers to pay to an one who will prove that he ever published a false certificate during the time he has had his medicine before the Public.

1,000 DOLLARS

Call on the agents and get a Pamphlet containing genuine certificates. As persons envious of the large sale of the Venetian Liniment have stated it is injurious to take it internally, Dr. Tobias has taken the following

OATH,

I, Samuel I Tobias, of the City of New York, being duly sworn do depose that I compound a Liniment called Venetian, and that the ingredients of which it is composed are perfectly harmless to take internally, even in double the quantity named in the Direction accompanying each bottle.

New York, January 9th, 1856.
S. I. TOBIAS.

Sworn to this day before me,
Fernando Wood, Mayor.

Price 25 & 50 cents, sold by the druggists and Patent Medicine Dealers throughout the United States.

Also for sale Dr. Tobias' Horse Liniment in pint Bottles at 50 cents, warranted superior to any other.

20,000 IN ONE MONTH.

ERNEST LINWOOD,
By Caroline Lee Hentz.

ALTHOUGH but a single month has passed since the first copy of this brilliant book was issued, yet so great has been the demand for the last and most beautiful work from the pen of its lamented authoress, that we are now printing the

TWENTIETH THOUSAND,

with an unabated demand still pressing us. Since the days of the Lamplighter, no book has sold so rapidly, or become so universally popular.

Col. Fuller of the New York Mirror, in one of the most elegant articles ever penned, in regard to authors or their productions, uses the following beautiful language:

Ernest Linwood.'

"Death darkens his eye, unplumes his wings,
But the sweetest song is the last he sings."

In the volume entitled "Ernest Linwood," just issued by Jewett & Co., of Boston, we have the dying song of the elegant and gifted Mrs. Caroline Lee Hentz.—Mournfully sweet like the sigh of an Æolian lyre, yet deep and oracular as the voice of many waters, it seems to have been poured forth while her soul floated down to the ocean of Rest. On almost every page we can trace the shadow of the death-angel, who bore her away when her song was ended. Mysterious gleams from beneath the uplifting veil of Spirit-land stare as we read. The book is a broad-cast farewell—a lingering hand-grasp from one we loved. If we substitute, its impressive passages are revelations of the inner life of the writer—wonderfully vivid and absorbing, because wonderfully real.

We will not attempt to follow out, in this notice, the thread of an inimitable tale in so doing we should only anticipate scenes and events, which come, with beautiful linkings and fine effect, before the eye of the reader. We would not rob the book of half its charm.

Sweet Gabrielle Lynn will tell her own story.

THE Subscriber desires to give notice that he has for sale the following new and attractive Colored Prints; which are fully equal, if not superior to any that has heretofore been issued.

LIFE ON THE WESTERN FRONTIER,
From Paintings by A. F. Tait.

THE PURSUIT.—Size 23 x 30.

Representing a skirmish on the Praire. A Mounted Trapper in full pursuit of an Indian Chief, decked in his war paint and plumes. The savage warrior seems urging his horse to his utmost speed and attempting to dodge the impending bullet from the levelled pistol of his foe. In the distance, the rest of the band are retreating before the rifles of the hunters.

THE LAST WAR WHOOP.—Size 23 x 30.

The unerring bullet has brought the grim warrior to the ground, from which he partly raises himself to give the last death yell of defiance to his enemy, who seated on his saddle with the discharged pistol still in his hand, seems to regard him with a look of mingled pity and hate. The fiery mustang steed of the Indian wildly endeavors to break the lasso with which the Trapper holds him. The position of the beautiful blood bay horse of the latter, is particularly fine, as he regards the fallen savage with starting eye, ears laid back, and fore feet braced, as if shuddering at the unearthly sound.

Two Spirited Illustrations of American Lake and Forest Scenery, in Winter.

DEER SHOOTING "on the Shattagee" Size 23 x 30.

Two hunters in the foreground are crouching behind the thick cedar bushes, one of them aiming his rifle at a noble buck which with two does seem to have come down to the opposite side of a small stream to drink. The fresh snow on the ground and fallen trees, broken only by the hunters foot marks, is finely represented, and the whole scene one that will delight the eye of every lover of hunting and wood craft.

TROUT FISHING, (through the ice,) on Chateaugay Lake. Size 23 x 30.

On the frozen surface of the lake in the front of the picture, stands an enthusiastic disciple of Izaak Walton, who, through a hole cut in the ice, is pulling up a fine Trout to be added to the group of beauties "of the same sort," which are lying on the Hemlock boughs beside him. In the back ground is seen the snow capped hills, and mid way the wintry blast whirls the light snow in a stand before it. This is an extremely pleasing and natural picture, in all its details, and gives a vivid idea of our vigorous northern winters.

THE CARES OF A FAMILY.—Size 23 x 28.

From the Original Painting by A. F. TAIT, lately exhibited at the Boston Athenæum, and at the National Academy of design, at New York.

A very elegant and interesting picture of a group of Quail and young, (life size.) The male bird mounted on a moss grown log, with head erect, and eye intent on the watch, lest danger shall menace his charge, and the mother bending down with open mouth, apparently calling her children to feast on a tiny fly resting on the grass before her. Two of the little fledglings are running with eager haste to secure the tempting morsel. The solicitude of the parent birds, and the timid reliance of the young brood are represented in this beautiful group in a manner which elicits at once the admiration and sympathy of the beholder, and would successfully appeal to the forbearance of the keenest sportsman.

Four doors east of Broadway between Fulton Business.

Health of American Woman.

Miss Catharine Beecher's excellent book has directed some attention to the subject of the health—or rather ill health—of our country-women. A spicy article in Harpers' for June discusses the same matter, as far as city residents are concerned. It is unfortunately true, however that, delicate and fragile as are metropolitan ladies, our country dames outvie them in this respect. This, too, in spite of the purer air and the early hours kept of necessity where there are few public amusements and large assemblies; in spite, too, of more active household employment. The causes, then, must be somewhat different, which yet produce the same result.

It is true that a portion of the physical suffering of city women who are exempt from labor may be due to the want of mind and body, and to indulgence in indolent habits. But the daily saunter in Broadway, even though the fair pedestrian be hampered with half a dozen skirts of whalebone, haircloth, moreen and flannel, or swathed and manacled in other fashionable monstrosities, is favorable to health; while her intellect finds, if not full development, a little mincing excitement—enough to keep it from stagnation—in combinations and comparisons of dress and shopping, and the small gossip of her circle of acquaintance.

We should go to the root of the matter, and assign, as the chief cause, the want of proper development in fancy and childhood. If mothers were bent on having their offspring grow up sickly, deformed and imbecile, they could not adopt a surer method of effecting the purpose than the prevailing system of training. From their birth, babies are excluded from the air and light and kept in overheated apartments. As soon as they can make their wants understood, their intense craving for the blessings of fresh air and sunshine are manifest. They plead, supplicate and weep for what nature made essential to their vigorous growth; but in most cases it is denied to the little wailing innocents.

Almost the first word lisped by a babe is a petition to be taken out. But this earnest voice of nature is stifled, and the victim compelled to suffer imprisonment—as a general rule—though, perhaps allowed the small relief of an hour every pleasant day of doors—till an unatural condition of the system is superinduced, and the child actually shrinks from, or is injured by, the atmosphere out side of the four walls.

We knew a lady who would not suffer her children even to stand at the closed windows with out being muffled—"The are sure to take a cold," she would say—and so they were; for habitual confinement had induced a morbid susceptibility hardly to be overcome.

Too prevalent in the city is the custom of keeping young children in the house, or, at the best, allowing them but partially and occasionally the free use of their limbs in the free air—and so mighty and prolific are the evils, without any mixture of good, flowing from the practice—that it cannot be too often or too forcibly pressed on public attention. Several gentlemen in this city have constructed gymnasiums in the upper part of their houses, with every imaginable contrivance for exercising all the limbs and increasing their strength.

This drop to the ocean may answer the purpose for their families in inclement weather; but nothing can compensate even to them for the want of the invigorating process devised by nature's self—in the stimulus of pure air, the bright, joyous sunshine, and perpetual variety sights and sounds; and good as gymnasiums may be, there is no possible way of their general introduction.

No contrivance, no device of man can produce a substitute for the pure air and exercise which nature demands, and which common sense teaches us are necessities for children.

How will the Whigs Act?

The New York Commercial Advertiser, a Whig journal, thus expresses its opinion on this head:

There is that in the platform of the Democratic National Convention which should make conservative Whigs pause ere they join the Democratic ranks. It is, in our minds, the great drawback to a nomination that otherwise would have led men of all parties to feel a firm confidence in the well-being and peaceful prosperity of the country, whether Mr. Fillmore or Mr. Buchanan should be elected. We refer to the latent filibusterism contained in five resolutions on foreign affairs.—These resolves, alike from the novel element they introduce and from their sentiment, have awakened, and must yet awaken, painful apprehensions in the minds of all conservative citizens. By many conservative Democrats, even, they are regarded as a drawback to Mr. Buchanan's nomination; and had they been followed up, as it was at one time generally reported that they were, by the nomination of Gen. Quitman, of filibuster notoriety, would propably have proved fatal to the success of the ticket. Is any true Whig disposed to go the length of those resolutions?

It cannot be denied that some Whigs hesitate to avow themselves supporters of Millard Fillmore, because they entertain discouraging views of his prospect of election. It has been the policy of his most violent opponents, the Republicans, to encourage this gloomy view of the future, and circumstances have perhaps favored their misrepresentations. We suspect that time will show that his prospect of success is by no means disheartening. At any rate, it will be the course of true wisdom to wait Mr. Fillmore's return to the United States, and the fuller development of public sentiment that will be made when all the candidates are before the country. The party which nominated Mr. Fillmore is known to be not only numerically strong, but perfect in organising, and adroit in the conduct of electioneering campaigns. We are assured by leading members of that party that Mr. Fillmore's prospects are good, irrespective of the Whig and other conservative support which it is expected he will receive. There gentlemen express the belief that if the Whigs generally give him their aid, his election will be secured, and they add that ere long some demonstrations will confirm this assurance.

It is very easy for gentlemen to talk about thousands of Whigs deserting their standard and their principles, while disdaining before a party to whom they have themselves deserted: but in our humble judgment Whigs generally are made of such feeble stuff, and do not readily or slowly go through such transmutations. The large portion of true Whigs, and especially such as have stood firm during recent trials of their consistency, are not office seekers. They ask no patronage, and desire no reward beyond the consciousness of having performed their duty and served their country to the best of their ability. They are not eager, therefore, to be of the majority, and do not desert to the enemy as soon as they perceive themselves in the minority. They prefer justice to expediency, and however far they may be driven from the possession of power, will yet adhere to principle. We hold therefore, that Mr. Preston spoke without authority when he made the declaration before the Democratic Convention which elicited applause from flattered listeners, and that Mr. Fillmore, Whig, and not Mr. Buchanan, Democrat, will receive the body of Whig votes through the Union.

Beauchelet's swearing.

In a late reply to a Roman Catholic, Brownlow has the following significant paragraph:

"But one word more about swearing. During our Circuit Court, some of your Catholic sacramenters were brought into court by Mr. M Allen, the Attorney General, to testify in cases of unlawful gaming, and retailing of Spirituous Liquors—they were sworn upon our Protestant Scriptures, and every one of them swore lies, by the testifying that they knew just nothing! The Attorney General then produced a Catholic Bible, with a Cross on its back—made them examine it, swore them on that, and they disgorged more than it was supposed they knew! Can Protestants call for such men to be called into one of our courts to give testimony against them? Never!"

New Committee Rooms.

A visit a day or two since to the two wings of the Capitol now in process of building suffered to furnish some idea of the manner in which these noble structures are intended to be decorated.—The room in the extreme northeast corner of North wing appears to be very nearly finished, and the work in it has been done in a most elaborate and beautiful way. The floor, in common with those of the whole suite on the same (ground) story, is beautifully inlaid with Italian pavement; but the ceiling is what will chiefly arrest the attention and draw out the admiration of the beholder. The designs for the ceiling, which is frescoed, are extremely rich, almost to exuberance in fact, the eye becomes well nigh bewildered with the luxuriance of ornament presented to its gaze. Beautiful as the sight of this room is by daylight, yet one perceives that under the softening effect of a galaxy of gas burners it will be like a veritable fairy temple.

One of the rooms of the South wing is also near completion, and is well calculated to astonish the visiter, especially if it has not been his fortune to have gone the rounds of sight seeing in Europe. The South and North walls are illustrated with large sized heads of Washington and Jefferson respectively, in which the likenesses seem to be remarkably well preserved. On the Eastward, just below the cornice, is a scene in fresco representing Cincinnatus at his plow when called upon to become the leader of his people against a ruthless foe. Directly opposite to this, on the West wall, is a scene from American history parallel to that of Cincinnatus: that is to say, Putnam at his plow receiving the intelligence of the battle of Lexington. Above, on the ceiling, are spirited emblems of the four seasons, also done in fresco. Other ornaments decorate the room.—Whilst passing from this room, which adjoins the apartments in use by Capt. Meigs and his assistants, we glanced at a drawing of the Capitol as it will be when completed and surmounted with the dome. The sight was enough to swell the patriotic mind with honest pride, such are the magnificent proportions and surpassing beauty of the American Capitol as it will, by God's blessing, shortly be. National Intelligencer.

Alien Influence in the United States.

Some one has not inaptly described great cities as "sores upon the body politic." This is a harsh and not very elegant expression, but there is, doubtless, a great deal of truth in it, especially with reference to the subject of politics. It is a singular fact that so many of the annual emigrants to these shores prefer to settle down amid the filth and obscurity of our large cities, rather than push forward to the open lands of the West. Thousands thus suffer and starve, who might otherwise live comfortably and rise to respectability as mechanics or tillers of the soil. There seems to be a natural affinity between the great body of emigrants and that kind of degradation which is only to be found in densely populated towns. But even this is not so great an evil as the one which, under our institutions, naturally flows from its

Were this vast annual accession to our population to be scattered over the land, though their aggregate strength might be as great, their power would be neutralized by such a distribution of their numbers; while, by swelling the ranks of voters in our large cities and towns, they soon reach a point where they hold the balance of power, or else control, by numerical strength alone, the municipal,
