Corruption completed their trust. ruin which indiscretion began. A National Bank, in truth as well as in name, would have avoided both, and would have escaped their consequences. A National Charter would have saved it from the necessity of the one-the consciousness of the jealousy with which, so long as it was under such a charter, it would be watched, would have preserved it from the other. But, as soon as it secured a State charter, and was removed from the lynxeyed scrutiny of its opponents, it threw off all restraint, and plunged into the wildest excesses. Its bankruptcy has been the result-a result which, though seemingly having no direct connection with the Remeval of the Deposits and its sequent measures, is the fruit of the unhappy policy of which that act was the forerunner-Lynchburg Virginian.

THE UNION IN DANGER. The refusal of the Executive of New York to surrender the fugitives from Justice demanded by the State of Virginia, is not only an outrage upon the rights of Virginia and a flagrant May. violation of the Constitution of the United States, but is a palpable infraction of the established principles of international law; and it is the duty and interest of all the other States in the Union to express their disapprobation of it in terms so decided and emphatic, as will bring the delinquent authorities of the "Empire State" to a sense of their duty. Their steps, in this matter, must be condemned and retraced. There is nothing that will so swiftly and so surely lead ligations of the compact by which the States er irreparable. are bound together. Under the laws of nations, says a distinguished public jurist, " every State is bound to deny an asylum to criminals;" and is, therefore, obliged to deliver up fugitives upon demand, " as well in the case of the subjects of the State surrendering, as in the case of the subjects of the power demanding the fugitive." Here, then, the act is condemned by a general law, founded upon the broad principles of reason and justice, which applies to all enlightened and civilized nations, though in their respective governments totally distinct and independent of each other. But how much more is it condemned by the express provisions of the instrument by which our States are connected in the closest bonds of union, which plainly and pointedly provides that " a person charged in any State " with treason, felony, or other crime, who shall " flee from justice, and be found in another State, "shall, on the demand of the Executive author-" ity of the State from which he fled, be deliver-

THE VALUE OF OUR RAIL ROAD.

The value of our tail road to the public-to the farmer, the merchant and the traveller-is not properly appreciated, nor much considered. It ought to be prized and patronized for the safety, speed and saving, with which it transports passengers and produce. An instance of its expedition has just been brought to our notice .-Mr. W. C. Tucker, of this City, has just reseived his Spring Goods in eight days from New York, after one day's detention in Petersburg, by way of the Rail Road. Just think of thatheavy lot of goods transported five hundred miles in one week! A single example will itlustrate the cheapness and saving of this mode of conveyance. A gentleman farming in this County not on a very lurg e scale, informs us that he saves, on the single article of salt, during the year, by ordering it from Petersburg on the Rail Road, twelve dollars. If farmers would manage prodently, the road would save them enough to pay their taxes annually. There is

Mr. Biddle has published three or four long and labored letters to the public, intended to exculpate himself from blame. Whether he has done this successfully or not, we are not prepared to say; for as yet we have not read his letters. But the Richmond Compiler thinks his honor is untarnished, though his reputation as a financier has suffered. That paper says:

"Mr. Biddle's letters, it is said, will provoke severe rejoinder from the Committee. His last letter is a very plausible one; but he has not yet justified or attempted to justify his as sumptions of authority and his invasions of th rules of Banking. This he cannot do. Some of these stocks are no doubt now selling for $5, or thereabouts, in the $100. It is owing to the state of the times that they are so depreciated perhaps in some cases, in some certainly not; but it is owing to bad management, and improper assumptions of responsibility that the Bank holds them."

"THEY SAY."

We have no where seen any proposition to allow General Harrison's tamily a larger amount from the Public Treasury than a year's salary, which is $25,000. Yet the Standard says, "They say the nation owes a debt to General Harrison, and Congress must appropriate the million and a half or two millions out of the people's money !" Will the Standard tell the publie which of the They Says it is who has said this? There is a notorious personage who bears this cognomes, first cousin to Nobody, (another very notable & suspicious character,) who is regarded hereabouts as a totally irresponible fellow; and what he says only goes for what it is worth, and that is just nothing at all. le this the witness whom the Standard quotes, and on whom the Standard relies !

FIRE AT NORTH BEND!

We are gratified to learn from the following extract, that the fire at North Bend was not so disastrous as first reported to have been: "Cincinnati, April 13.
"FIRE AT NORTH BEND! -The belief was general vesterday morning, that Gen. Harrison's residence had been burned. The house caught on fire at 3 P. M. in the western wing, and baffled all exertions to subdue it. It was only by pulling down the connecting hall with the main building that that was saved. The western wing is now a heap of ashes, and the hall entirely demolished.

"The family of Gen. Harrison feel deeply in debted to our Irish friends who first gave the alarm, and who succeeded in putting the fire out. They left their work on the canal, and labored as if the house were their own. But for the generous exertions, indeed, of these noble-hearted trishmen, the whole building must have been destroyed; and they have not alone the thanks plause of all our citizens, for their prompt and efficient aid."

CORRECTION.

A paragraph is going the rounds, which states that President TYLER was made Governor of Virginia by the death of the Governor, was made Senator by the death of one before his time expired, President by the death of General Harrison, and his lady is the daughty of Cooper, the tragedian. The Richmond Whig says there is not one word of truth in it, except the fact that Gov. Tyler succeeds to the Presidency by the death of Gen. Harrison. His son married Miss Cooper, an elegant and accomplished lady.

streets of that city. They were in the firemen's dress, were accompanied by a full band of music, and bore an urn, covered with a pall. Over 600 torches were borne in the procession. The Albany Journal says: "The night was still and very dark; and the effect produced by the long array of mourners at that unusual hour-the funeral emblems-the solemn music, and the strong red glare of the torches, revealing from the gloom and lighting up with picturesque effect the houses and crowds of spectators which thronged the windows as they past, left an impression which will not soon be effaced from the memory of those who beheld the

SABBATH SCHOOLS. The correspondent of the North American says that General Harrison in his last out-door exercise, was engaged in assisting the gardener in adjusting some grape vines. The gardener remarked that there would be but little use in trailing the vines, so far as any fruit was concerned, as the boys would come on Sunday, while the family was at church, and steal all the grapes; and suggested to the General as a guard against such a loss, that he should purchase an active watch dog. Better, said the General, to employ a Sabbath school teacher; a dog may take care of the grapes, but a good Sabbath school teacher will take care of the grapes and the BEAUTIFUL ILLUSTRATION.

At the Oratorio of the Creation, at the Musical Fund Hall, says the North American, just before the passage " and God said, Let there be light," occurred, the gas was shut off, and there was a dim and obscure light in the Hall. The audience hardly understood its purpose, but when the words and there was light" were pronounced, the gas was suddenly let on, and the room glowed with an intense and brilliant light. The effect was perfectly electrical. Many of the audience almost sprang from their seats, the illusion was so startling.

GENERAL HARRISON AND THE FARMER.

The correspondent of the North American relates the following interesting anecdote: During his brief sojourn in Washington, Gen. Harrison was in the habit of taking early morning walks, and frequently called at the market House. On one of these occasions he purchased a new milch cow of a neighboring farmer, and requested him to drive it to the President's House. The General was there to attend to the animal, and invited the farmer in to take some refreshment: procured a bowl of hot coffee, ham and eggs, and continued conversation with him about farming.

The farmer having finished his breakfast, remarked to the General, You have bought my cow and given me two dollars more than I asked, and a good breakfast besides; but if it am the President, replied the General. The farmer at first looked incredulous, having taken his hospitable friend for the steward; but convinced of his mistake, with much frankness observed, Well General, I voted against you at the election, but I did'nt know you thea. That single remark-I did'nt know you then-will explain thousands of votes cast against the good General at his election.

We have late news from England-sev enteen days later than before received, and up to the 4th of April. The steamer Columbia made her appearance in Bes on harbor on Monday evening, in a passage of fifteen days from Liverpool. A large number of passengers came out-fifty from Liverpool to Boston and thirty from Livcood to Halifax. Neither the political nor commercial intelligence received is of much importance. The news taken out by the Britania, and the packets which arrived about the same time, had had the desired effect upon the public mind. The war bluster had changed to a gentle breez, and every thing in word and in fact, seemed to be pacific. Public attention, however, was centered upon McLeod, and the newspapers were engaged in an animated discussion touch ing the offender and his offence. Some few, upon paper, are disposed to be peremptory in the fulfilment of the demand for release, and others are wise enough to see the relationship there is, which exists between the Federal and State Governments, and to know that such a demaid is practically impossible. Wise men, however, there, as here, talk wisdom and feet lisposed to leave a prisoner in the hands of the law, trusting to the good sense and good intentions of our Government for a happy issue of pending difficulties. have read with some care all the comments of the English press, and see nothing i any of them to excite even a feeling of a

The political news from the East and the Continent is not important. In Turkey things remain in statu quo. The de novement has not come yet, and from the policy persued by the four Powers a de cision would seem to be as far off as ever. The French Ambassadors are yet disposed to play into the hands of MEREMET ALI; and at least to prove troublesome.

Affairs in France are also pretty much as they were. So in Spain, Portugal, and indeed in all parts of Europe. From Chi na there was no news in England, upon the sailing of the steamer, so late as that received here,

The commercial intelligence, briefly told, is, that cotton had declined I 8th of a penny; that flour was dull; American securities pretty much as they were, and the money market generally in a straightened condition. The profile news from the United States had, neverthelers, im proved the condition of things, and stocks had felt the benefit of a restored confidence. State stocks, so far as there is a sale for them, bring batter prices abroad than at home; and, strange to say, there is more confidence in American securities in England than in the United States.

President HARRISON'S Inaugural is pub lished in full or in part in all of the En-glish papers. In all circles it is well spo-ken of, and its tone and temper in regard to foreign nations spoken of as dignified, diplomatic, courteous, and all that.
