The St. Louis Republican reminds those Locofocos who are laboring to manufacture something out of the temporary revenue act or tariff law, passed at the late extra session of Congress, that they should look at the legacy which their party has left to their successors, in the shape of confused and depreciated currency and exorbitant exchanges. According to the Republican, the premium paid in a single week by the merchants of St. Louis for exchange on the East will amount to more than the whole amount of duties paid on all the imported articles taken to that market in a year. Yet the taxation in both these cases falls upon the consumer, who, by the effect of Locofoco legislation, is now paying two duties, under two tariffs; one become necessary to discharge the debt President Van Buren created, and the other collected by the brokers in consequence of the confusion which the same party introduced into the currency. Nat. Int. John M. Botts, Esq. publishes, in the Richmond Whig, a long address to the public, in reply to that of Mr. Richard Adams, which we noticed a few days ago. We did not need this statement, nor did any person who knows Mr. Botts, to satisfy us that he was not influenced by any thing like fear, in refusing to accept a challenge from Mr. A. The rejection of a challenge, indeed, argues a moral courage, much greater than nine times in ten, dictates an acceptance. More cowardly have fought than have refused to fight.— Lynch, Virginian.
