I must either adopt the commor, practice with many dealers in article of running down other instruments in order to raise the character of my own, or I must do as I have been endeavoring to do for eight years past, get the public to form their own opinion by frying my instruments. The former is a course have never adopted, and never shall; the latter ! have tried and found to work well. I believe that my Piano Portes are at least equal to any made in this or any other country that I have heard of, but that opinion being an interested one, I do not ask the public to depend upon it, alone, and simply beg of them to teste the matter by actual trial. Any person desiring to purchase a Piano, can take mine upon trial, and withhold payment until they can prove the instrument.

No. 1. Price 25 Cents. THE FARMER'S ENCYCLOPÆDIA

DICTIONARY OF RURAL AFFAIRS Embracing all the Recent Discoveries in Ag-ricultural Chemistry, adapted to the Comprehension of Unscientific Rea-

BY CUTHEERT W. JOHNSON. Enlarged, Improved and Adapted to the United States, by a Practical Farmer, assisted by numerous scientific Gentlemen.

THE work upon husbandry now ushered before the American public is the production of an Eaglish gentleman of great intettingence, assisted by some of the best authorities upon rural subjects in his country By collecting and condensing the most interesting details relative to farming, chiefly, deriv d from living authors, such as Professors Lie-big, Lgwe, Sir J. E. Smith, Brande, Youst, Thompson, Lindley, I. F. Johnson, etc., he has been enabled to present the very latest informa-ting, and furnish a fund of matter which cannot fail to attract all who take an interest in tural affairs, so long studied and so thoroughly understood at these must needs be in Great Britain.

The absence of speculative views, with the very practical and matter-of-fact character of the information given upon all subjects treated of, will perhaps be found to constitute the highest recommendation

JOHNSON'S FARMER'S ENCYCLOPEDIA, AND DICTIONARY OF RURAL APPAI'S. The comparatively limited rouge of English ag-riculture is "strongly contrasted with the diversity of culture met with in the United States. A work of culture met with in the United States. A work limited to an account of productions of the soil and climited to England would leave out many of the most important crops which exact the attention of the American farmer and planter. Hence the necessity of adapting abook of the kind to the new local-ties into which it is introduced. This, as may be well supposed, presents a task of no small labour. It has been charged upon agriculturists, that improvem into in husbandry encounter great opposition and generally work their way very slowly; whereas inventions and improvements made in the manufacturing and mechanic arts are sexed upon and put to turing and mechanic arts are so zed upon and put to profit almost as quickly as promalgated.

The success with which science has developed the agencies concerned in the various stages and processes of regetation, and the certainty with which deficiencies of soil can now be detected and remedied, have suddenly elevated agriculture from the condition of an art under the guidance of common observation and empirical experiment, to a acidnoe regulated by recognised principles of induc-tion. We are indeed much mistaken if the day has not arrived when the successes of the book farmer shall cause his incredutous brother farmer of the old routine system to cease his taunts and spend same of his leisure hours in scarching into books containing modern information in regard to matters

Many of the processes which may be resorted to degree mysteries to thousands in the United States, although familiarly known and long employed in other countries, where with not halfthe natural advantages the labour of the husbandman is far better f. Suck has been the agricultural improvement effected in Flanders, that the whole country may almost be styled a garden, each acre being expable of supporting its man. Scotland, in little espable of supporting its man. more than half a century, has changed from comparative unproductiveness into one of the richest agricultural districts in Europe. In Great Britain the products of the grain harvests have increased within sixty years from one hundred and seventy to three hundred and forty millions of bushels. The system inculcated by the new principles has, even in some districts of our own country, where they have been well followed up, increased the value of larins two, three and four hundred per cent.—from twenty and thirty dellars to one hundred dellars per care. "It has," new Buel, "made every age of arore than half a century, has changed from com-'It has," says Buel, "made every sere of arable land u,on which it has been practised ten years and lying configuous to navigable waters, or a good market, worth at least one hundred dollars for ag-

Some instruments would be considered excellent until brought into comparison side by side with others, Some are very good at first, but soon become worthless and others good but not the best. The important part of a Piano (the action) is hid from the eves of purchasers, and there is as much difference in the principles upon which they are constructed as it is consible to conceive of. Under such eircumstances would it not be most orudent to order a Piano from a dealer in the ar-

COLD WATER MAGAZINE.

This work is to be, as its title indicates, devohoped and confidently anticipated, that our exer tions, through the medium of its pages, will be productive of much good, especially to the young and rising generation, for whom it is more parecularly designed. It will be our aim to inculcate, by statements of facts, by illustrations, intertisting parratives, sketches and tales, the princi, ples of Total Asstrance and sound morality to give the young a just abhorrence of the use of intoxicating drinks, and cause them to shungevery temptation which may lead to so baneful a practice; to incite in them a just and laudable desire to benefit their fellow men, by adding their mits of influence to the moral power which is now at work, and which promises to wipe away the blot upon the fair tame of our country: to sid tibereformer, and encourage the reformed in their prasseworthy efforts to conquerthe enslaving pason for drink, which has debased so many of the noblest hearts and proudest intellects; to speak he words of hope and encouragement to the drunkard, and of sober truth and remonstrance to those who still persist in the unholy, unchristian and tomanly practice of dealing in that which is origining the fairest flowers, poisoning the holiest affections severing the fondest ties, and filling the land with crime, micry and wo.
