PRAYING MACHINES.

On the high roads in Japan, every mountain and cliff is consecrated to some divinity, to whom travellers are required to address long prayers; but as this would require much time, many have adopted the custom of writing some form of prayer and elevating the same on a simple sort of wind-wheel, on the top of a staff, so that the wind may keep it in motion, which is deemed equivalent to a repetition of the prayers

REBUILDING.

The weather during the winter has been o severe as to prevent new brick buildings from being commenced. But now that milder weather may soon be calculated on, we observe that preparations are made for a number of buildings. By an advertisement in today's paper A will be seen that pro-posa's are solicited for cuver ng the premises of the late Mr. McArn with five ten; ments for stores .- But what is of much more public concernment, is the fact that the work of rebuilding the Lafayette Hotel, on an enlarged and more conven scale, has been commenced, and will doubt leas be projected with energy.
