AGRICULTURE.

AGRICULTURE OF THE CHINESE.

Views Entertained on the Identity and difference in Tea Plants.—There are few subjects connected with the vegetable kingdom which have attracted such a large share of public notice...

During my travels in China, since the last war, I have had frequent opportunities of inspecting some extensive tea districts in the black and green tea countries of Canton, Fokien, and Chekiang...

In various parts of the Canton province, where I had an opportunity of seeing tea cultivated, the species proved to be the Thea bohea, or what is commonly called the black tea plant.

Thus far my actual observation exactly verified the opinions I had formed on the subject before I left England, viz., that the black teas were prepared from the Thea bohea, and the green from Thea viridis.

It appears, therefore, that the black and green teas of the northern districts of China (those districts in which the greater part of the teas for the foreign markets are made) are both produced from the same variety...

we give the subject our unprejudiced consideration, there seems nothing surprising in this state of things. Moreover, we must bear in mind that my previous opinions were formed upon statements made by the Chinese...

Soil, Aspect, and Culture.—The soil of the tea districts is, of course, much richer in the northern provinces than it is in Quanton. Tea shrubs will not succeed well unless they have a rich sandy loam to grow in.

The tea plantations in the north of China are always situated on the lower and most fertile sides of the hills, and never on the low lands. The shrubs are planted in rows about four feet apart, and about the same distance between each row...

In a fortnight, or three weeks, from the time of the first picking, or about the beginning of May, the shrubs are again covered with fresh leaves, and are ready for the second gathering...

Gen. Cass has never written, spoke, or acted in such a manner. (Ga.) Patriot. To one familiar with the Democratic policy of conducting the campaign, the above reckless assertion of the Patriot is not astonishing.

Gen. Cass was a zealous advocate of the Wilmot Proviso, in August, 1846. It is also made in the face of Gen. Cass's own acknowledgment, in his place in the Senate, in March, 1847, that "he would have voted for the Proviso" when it was first introduced...

THE STAR.

Let every Southern man read the following extract from the Richmond Whig, and our word for it, he will be disgusted with the double faced, "confusion" candidate of the Federal Locofocos...

BONES FOR THE LOCOS.

The Lynchburg Patriot compares the effect of the signature of the Oregon bill by Mr. Polk, on the Locofoco, to a bomb-shell thrown suddenly and unexpectedly into a camp.

"The Hartford Times, a Cass paper dyed in the wool, says:— 'A Northern man, particularly a Democrat or a "Free Soil" man must be derided himself who will vote for any other man than General CASS; and by withholding his vote, indirectly aid the election of General Taylor...'

"The same paper takes a very different view of General Cass' notions about the people of a territory seeking the slave question, from its Southern coadjutors. Hear what it says:—

"The Federalists have very strongly urged that General Taylor being opposed to the Proviso, would not veto any bill that Congress might pass upon the subject...

"Does not every one opposed to slavery see that Gen. Cass occupies the best position—and indeed the only true practical position—for the people, with whom he would leave the whole matter, will settle this question in a short time, to suit themselves, and Congress cannot prevent them from doing so."

"Zachery Taylor would veto no law establishing slavery in the new territories, if the Whigs speak truly of him; the Southerners say they know he is with them on this subject."

Gen. Cass says the South should never submit to the Wilmot proviso, and his friends claim he will not veto any bill relative to slavery in the territories...

The same meeting adopted the following, and among other resolutions: "Resolved, That the charge that the Democracy are in favor of extending Slavery, or of perpetuating its existence, is founded in falsehood...

The Boston Statesman, in which the foregoing speech and resolutions first appeared, contains the following resolutions: "No extra effort had been made to get out a large meeting, but before the hour for assembling had arrived, the hall was filled with its largest capacity with an audience numbering at least 1200."

"Resolved, That the action of the Democratic National Convention in the nomination of Cass and Butler, and the platform of principles adopted, meet our cordial approbation."

"Resolved, That the Democratic party is the only party that ever effected political reforms or protected the poor and unfortunate from tyranny and oppression."

either from position or past acts, the friends and supporters of slavery. Gen. Taylor is a large slaveholder, and owns at least a quarter of a million of property, the security and value of which depend upon the integrity of the institution of slavery being preserved intact.

"Gen. Cass was born in a free State, and with the exception of a few months of his boyhood, and the five years he had resided in Washington as Secretary of War he had been a citizen of free communities."

"Resolved, That the Democratic party of this State by repeated resolutions in the State and County Conventions, stand pledged to oppose, by every lawful and constitutional means, the extensions of slavery into any territory belonging to the United States, now free, and that we here reiterate that pledge."

"Resolved, That while we are ready in the most perfect good faith to abide by the compromise of the constitution upon the subject of Slavery, and to protect the citizens of the several States guaranteed thereby, we are as democrats and men uncompromisingly opposed to the extension of slavery into any territory now free."

"Resolved, That we have the utmost confidence in the patriotism, ability and honesty of Lewis Cass, and WM. O. Butler; that in their hands the country will be safe and the Government administered upon the principles of the platform of the Democratic party, and we pledge ourselves to use all honorable efforts to secure their election to the respective offices for which they are nominated."

"The Auburn (N. Y.) Advertiser states that Fred. Douglas, a runaway slave, denounced Taylor in a recent speech in Auburn as a hired assassin. The white orators who denounce Old Zack as a knave and traitor, must feel complimented by the company in which they fight."

"If Fillmore be an abolitionist, and Taylor little better, why are the abolitionists opposing, reviling and defaming them?" "We shall conclude, for to day, by the following extract from a Northern Cass paper:—

"The Democracy must triumph. Gen'l Cass will be our next President. Our now territories now free, will be kept free, till the people of the territories, when they come to organize as a State, adjust it upon their own responsibility, and in their own manner."

THE DEMOCRATIC PARTY AND THEIR CANDIDATES ARE IN FAVOR OF FREE SOIL AND FREE AND INALIENABLE HOMESTEAD LAWS!"

But probably the resolutions of a meeting at Quincy, (Massachusetts) are the most spicy of any. Here are two of them:

"Resolved, That we fully concur with the Buffalo Convention, that slavery in the State is under the control of the States; that we do not believe that by the capricious dictation of any Congress whatever, slavery shall be engrained upon the unlimited area of the growing West, but rather, that the subject shall be regulated by the citizens of the territories, in the full confidence that under the increasing light of intelligence and civil liberty they will reject it, and that the people, as a body politic, will never do wrong."

"Resolved, That the charge against the Democratic party as being the friends of Slavery, is false and that those who so assert, know it to be false that the only true friends and advocates of Free Soil are to be found in the Democratic ranks, that the elections of Cass and Butler is the only means by which the blessings of Universal Liberty can be secured to this glorious Union!"

On the 11th day of July, 1848, the Democratic State Convention of Vermont passed the following resolutions: "Resolved, That in the opinion of this Convention Congress have the Constitutional power, to prohibit the introduction of slavery into the territories of the United States, in which slavery does not now exist, so long as said territories remain under the jurisdiction of Congress; and that it is the imperative duty of Congress to exercise that power immediately."

"Resolved, That the Democratic party of this State by repeated resolutions in the State and County Conventions, stand pledged to oppose, by every lawful and constitutional means, the extensions of slavery into any territory belonging to the United States, now free, and that we here reiterate that pledge."
