

MORACE GREELY'S ADVICE TO COLORED CITIZENS.

A State convention of colored men is called to meet at Saratoga on the 17th inst. In view of this fact Hon. Horace Greely gives some timely and sensible hints to the Convention and its constituents, which might be read and treasured with profit by the colored people in this latitude. He says:

I. Never resent nor depreciate the application to yourselves of the term negroes. It means only that you are, in contradistinction to your fellow-citizens, black; and that is the literal fact. It is in your power to make the designation one of honor and pride by simply behaving better than other men—black cannot be very difficult. Let who will call you negroes in welcome, so that you prove yourselves true men.

II. Be far more anxious to give your sons good trades than to push them into office. Office is unstable and fleeting, while trades are enduring.

III. Don't waste your scanty means in starting distinctive organs or getting up negro churches, where you are allowed equal privileges with others in existing journals and churches. If you are excluded from these, you must of course act and speak for yourselves.

IV. Warn your people against spending too large a share of their earnings on fine clothes, dancing, drinking and other modes of sensual gratification. If they had saved half the money they have thus wasted, they need now ask favors of no man.

V. Turn your attention largely to the cultivation of the soil. It is your father's calling; and you can succeed in that in anything. Earth, air and water are as free and as bounteous to you as to others; you might settle whole counties if you would, and thus choose your own neighbors and manage your own schools.—Don't say you lack money; for nine-tenths of the pioneer settlers of all lands have been quite as needy as you are; but take hold and how out for yourselves farms and homes from the public domain or elsewhere.

VI. Wait and serve, shave and black boots while you must, and never doubt that any kind of useful though humble industry is preferable to idleness and dependence; but do not accept this as your inevitable destiny. Plan and save while you are in it to get out as soon as possible, and never rest till you live in your own house and till you own your farms.

THE SUICIDE OF A QUEEN.

Sarah Cooper, the wife of the King of the remnant of the famous and once powerful tribe of Delaware Indians, hanged herself on Sunday morning with an old shawl to the rafters of the house in which she was living at Williamsbridge, Westchester county, New York. She was married about a year ago to Osceola Cooper, the youthful King of all that is left of the once great tribe.—The New York Sun says:

The Queen was ordered on Saturday by her husband to wash a linen duster belonging to a young man in the same house, at which she became highly indignant and flew into a very violent passion. She vowed that she was lousy horn and bred, and would not touch it to anybody's washwoman, even if Osceola himself did command it. She then quit the house and wandered in the woods whether or no one knows. At nightfall she made her appearance in the dining-room, but spoke to no one, as she was evidently still very much incensed at the insult which she thought her husband had laid her.

Endeavoring to reconcile her, Osceola approached her and desired her to eat her supper, whereupon her fiery temper again took possession of her.

It was now the Kings turn now to become angry, and he told the Queen in very plain terms that she was putting on airs that did not become her. At this she ran out of the room, and nothing was thought of her until next morning.

As she did not make her appearance at the breakfast table, Osceola began to feel anxious. He repaired to her room, and finding it empty, a general search was made of the premises; still Queen Sarah was nowhere to be found. At last Mrs. Dr. Powell, the medicine woman of the tribe, thought her of the attic, and there they found the Queen suspended from a rafter by her shawl. Immediately under her was a little box, which she must have stood on while adjusting the noose, and which she had kicked from under her. The features were remarkably calm and natural.

The neck was dislocated, and it was evident that the dead Queen could not have suffered strangulation.

LYDIA THOMPSON AND HER FEMALE LOVER.—Miss Lydia Thompson, the blonde, is followed about the country by a woman named Griffin, who is frantically in love with her. Miss Griffin persecutes the actress with attention, and sends letters full of threats, strange oaths, and protestations of inexhaustible affection. This mania culminated in a fight between the adorer and the adored in a Chicago hotel on Monday night, and the matter was ventilated in the police court the next day. Miss Thompson testified as to the manner in which she had been annoyed by Miss Griffin, and produced numerous love-letters from which she professed undying love for the fair Lydia. A doctor testified that Miss Griffin was a monomaniac, and she was released upon her own recognizance, in the sum of $300 to keep the peace towards Miss Thompson, the proviso being required that she was to leave the city at once.

The London Spectator gives the philosophy of the war in a nut-shell when it says, "Europe must pass through a year, perhaps years of misery in order that one single man may secure the career and position of one single child. This war has no cause, no motive, no justification, save the fear of Napoleon Bonaparte that without it his boy's succession would not be clear." This is the fourth war he has begun for purely personal considerations.

A "CHICKEN SOUP" SPRING.—A wonderful new watering place is about to be opened in Virginia. The Richmond-Enquirer furnishes the subjoined particulars: "About two and a half miles from Ashland, in a northwesterly direction, upon the lands of Phillip Bowles, Esq., there have recently been discovered several curious hot springs. The one we speak of, and the most remarkable one of all, is of considerable size, the water of which, when properly seasoned with pepper and salt, cannot be distinguished from the best chicken soup. Of the hundreds who have partaken of it, all agree that it has precisely the taste of chicken soup or broth. The proprietor have made many experiments with the waters of this spring, and find it to be both wholesome and nutritious. Three pounds of beef boiled in the water of the spring yield as much soup as could be obtained from 12 pounds of the same meat cooked in common water.

THE NEGRO CADET INVESTIGATION.—Washington, Aug. 12.—The Court of Inquiry, to investigate the ill-treatment of the negro cadet, report that the negro was mainly untruthful, and recommend that both the negro and the cadet of whom he complains be court-martialed. General Belknap, however, disposed of the case by ordering that both the untruthful negro and abusive white embryo soldiers be reprimanded.

Experience of a Census Taker.—As for the ages of the negroes, that is almost certainly a matter of conjecture. So far as my experience goes, nineteen out of twenty cannot tell within ten years how old they are, nor are parents more accurate even with regard to their very young children. "John was born in cotton pick time, de year before freedom struck de earth;" "Jenny was two weeks old when Mass Charley got wounded in de war;" "Sam was born 'bout de time massa built him new gin-house;" "Jim was born in de Christmas week ob de year when frost killed de taters;" such are the data from which to collect, as nearly as may be, the ages of children, while the years of older persons are a matter of more vague uncertainty.

The Boston Advertiser announces that a new dance is to be introduced into society next winter, which is said to be something between a Highland fling and an Irish jig.

Bonaparte and Hohenzollern.—The connection between the Bonapartes and the Hohenzollerns constitutes an historical point of interest at this time. The first consul, with the object of compensating Murat for his services, bestowed on him the hand of his sister, Caroline Bonaparte, Murat being at the time a widower and a father. While yet a lieutenant of chasseurs, he had married, and a daughter had been born to him in January, 1793.—From this daughter, Marie Antoinette Murat, born seven years before her father's alliance with the Bonapartes, Prince Leopold is descended. "Murat," says the Pall Mall Gazette, "hardly ever noticed this child, who, in 1808, when only fifteen years old, married the son of the prince of Hohenzollern, who was taken prisoner at Elna, and became her father's friend."

"Life is Like Plum Cake."—Life, my brethren, is like plum cake," began Polly, impressively, folding her floury hands.—"In some the plums are all on top, and we eat them daily, until we suddenly find they are all gone. In others the plums sink to the bottom, and we look for them in vain as we go on, and often come to them when it is too late to enjoy them.—But in the well made cake the plums are wisely scattered all through, and every mouthful is a pleasure. We make our own cakes, in a measure; therefore, let us look to it, my brethren, that they are mixed according to the best receipt, baked in a well regulated oven, and eaten with a temperate appetite."

Mr. Wm. Beattie, a young gentleman of Greenville, South Carolina, was shot in the eye during the war, the bullet lodging in his head—internally. The most eminent surgical skill failed to extract this ball, and Mr. Beattie has from time to time suffered much from it. A few nights ago Mr. B. was seized with a violent fit of coughing, during which he felt something fall into his mouth. It proved to be the ball, which had been in his head five or six years. This ball, which weighs half an ounce, had worked its way slowly into the channel of the larynx, and the convulsive effort of coughing releasing it, fell, by its gravity, through the said channel.
