TO PHYSICIANS.

NEW YORK, August 10, 1868.

Allow me to call your attention to my preparation of

COMPOUND EXTRACT BUCHU.

The components are Buchu, Logg, Leaf, &c.

NOTE OF PREPARATION.

Buchu, in its natural state, is of a dark color. It is a plant that grows in the mountains of the Cape of Good Hope, and is very rich in resin, and very little sugar is used, and a small proportion of alcohol is used in its preparation. It is more palatable than any other.

SENSIBLE.

We copy the following from the New Bern Republican, and endorse every word:

Newspaper men are always setting forth the advantages of advertising. They try to prove it there is any "Royal Road" to fortune, that judicious advertising is that road. They cite examples of men who were not worth a dollar a few years ago, and who are now rolling in wealth and luxury; and they tell us that this magical change of fortune was all brought about through the agency of advertising. The evidence in favor of advertising is certainly too strong to admit of a reasonable doubt of its efficacy as a business stimulant and tonic. Advertising brings popularity, and popularity brings success.

THE DIVORCE CAMPAIGN.

The fall divorce campaign has now fairly opened in Indiana, and fifty-six cases for divorce are registered on the docket of the Court of Common Pleas of Marion county for consideration during the term which opened on Monday. Habitual drunkenness, abandonment, and adultery are the principal grounds for divorce complaints, with the usual accompaniment of cruelty, abandonment and adultery. Wm. H. Brown wishes to separate from his wife, Sarah J. Brown, because in the year 1864 she was guilty of cruel treatment of him by putting cowitch in his bed. Thirty-seven of the applications for divorce are filed by women, and only nineteen by men. August Ferber's wife gets drunk and stays out at night. Geo. W. Willard got drunk and married other women. Thomas McNair abandoned his Rachel and goes and serves a term at State prison. Robert Moorhouse complains that his dear Hattie fails to provide the necessities of life, and cruelly prosecutes her, Bobby before a Justice of the peace for assault and battery. Anna Sedam refuses to allow her Charles to enjoy the comforts of his home by (his or her) living therein, and taxes him with the support of worthless male relatives. Catharine Pugh brings two suits by two different attorneys against Ben Pugh, who leaves her alone and drinks with wild associates. Some of these discontented persons have lived together a long time. Abigail G. Townsend having been married in 1846 to Horace Townsend, from whom she now asks to be divorced because he abuses and fails to provide for her. Others found each other out more quickly. Mr. J. A. DeHoff married in 1869, gets drunk and abandons his wife in 1870. The divorce list shows most curious facts and is well worth careful reading.

TROCHU ON WAR.

Now that the approach of the German armies to Paris brings with each day into greater prominence the name of Trochu, the General whom the French army rejected, but upon whom the republic has imposed its greatest task, it will be interesting to see how he will perform it. Trochu is a man of great military and political talents, and is a man of great energy and courage. He is a man of great energy and courage. He is a man of great energy and courage.

FROM THE NEW YORK WORLD. A THOUSAND YEARS AGO.

It is certainly one of the greatest curiosities in history that exactly one thousand years ago, in the year of our Lord 970, the people of France and Germany fought under their kings upon the same soil, Lorraine, for very nearly the same reason. Lorraine, for very nearly the same reason. Lorraine, for very nearly the same reason.

ROMANCE ABOUT EUGENIE.

How she once became engaged to a Virginia Gentleman—The Match broken off by the Lion's Lair—A Wonderful Change of Destiny.

[Correspondence Lumburg Republican.]

As an American history, it is a romance, with a large family around him. As this time appeared in society, there Eugenie Mari de Gorman, Countess of Montijo, a lovely person and an aristocratic name securing her brilliant conquests in that society, and constituting her one of the most famous ladies in Paris. It was thought, and indeed freely remarked, that her mother was more ambitious than herself, that the former designed for her some great alliance, while Eugenie herself appeared a model of simple sincerity, a girl who would choose to consult her heart in any matrimonial affair. Her sister had just married the Duke of Alba and Borswick, a lineal descendant of James II. of England; and the worthy mother, Donna Maria, no doubt designed at least an equal matrimonial destiny for the more beautiful of her daughters. But the heart's foot always to be controlled even in the most aristocratic life, or to yield to its exactions or convenience. Eugenie lost hers to a fine-looking blonde Virginian, young William C. Rives, son of the American Minister. They were engaged to be married. But Aunt Judy Rives, a Virginia matron, very decided and angular in her scruples, interfered and broke off the match; the Countess was too "fast for her old Virginia views of social sobriety." The woman for whom future had reserved so much escaped the comparatively humble match that her heart had decided upon—the destiny of a quiet Virginia housewife—to ascend the throne of France. Alas, what other contrasts may yet remain for her! If an event had been ordered differently, if a prospective mother-in-law had proved complacent, the Empress, the woman who has adorned the throne of France and displayed to the world the charms of another Cleopatra, might at this moment be a quiet country matron living in a farmhouse near Coblenz Depot, county of Albenmarie, and State of Virginia!

THE ENFORCEMENT ACT.

The Baltimore Sun publishes the opinion of Judge Hugh L. Bond, of the United States District Court, in reference to the act of Congress of May 31st, 1870, for the enforcement of the Fifteenth Amendment of the Constitution of the United States. The Judge holds that it was not the intention of Congress to abolish the laws of the several States which prescribe the qualification of voters, or even to alter them, except so far as such qualifications are founded upon race, color or previous condition of servitude. He quotes the first section of the statute, which declares that it relates to "all citizens of the United States who are or shall be otherwise qualified to vote," and says that the meaning of this language is, that these citizens shall be qualified to vote by the laws of the State, or Territory, and that these persons without distinction or account of race, color or previous condition of servitude. Hence, it was decided that a registering officer, who in accordance with the Election law of West Virginia had refused to enter the name of a white citizen who had participated in the "Rebellion," was not liable under the act of Congress. The Judge also decided that the act of Congress only operated on the officers of any election at which any Representative or delegate in Congress shall be voted for, and the registering officer was not such an officer.

A UNITED GERMANY.

The Tribune says: After all, the notable fact of the war is not that each side is enthusiastic, or that splendid armaments are used, or that all Europe seems merging upon the struggle. The notable fact is that King William, at the Prussian headquarters, commands the army of United Germany. The dream of German philosophers and statesmen for a century has been accomplished by the rude stroke of Benedetti's diplomacy in an hour. The soldiers of Bavaria, Wurtemberg and the petty German States, that a year ago would almost as soon have thought of fighting under the French tri-color as beneath the Prussian eagle, now accept the orders of the Crown Prince as if they were already a part of the Prussian nationality. The battles to be fought may be lost or won by Prussia, but the grand issue of the war is already won. German unity, from the day that the troops of the smaller German governments were turned over to King William, was an accomplished fact.

FORGIVENESS.

The brave only know how to forgive. It is the most refined and generous pitch of virtue human nature can arrive at. Cowards have done good and kind actions, even have been found, nay, sometimes even conquered; but a coward never forgives. It is not his nature. The power of doing it flows out of a strength and greatness of the soul, conscious of its own force and security, and above the little temptations of resenting every fruitless attempt to interrupt its happiness. This is as true as preaching. Let any one skeptical notice and profit by his judgment.

The Empress Eugenie and her son, the Prince imperial, are living at Hastings in England, secluded from society.

DEATH OF EPISCOPAL CLEGGY.

The Baltimore papers announce the death of Rev. Milo Mahan, D. D., rector of St. Paul's church in that city, and one of the most eminent of the clergy of the Episcopal church in this country; also the death of Rev. George R. Morrison, rector of Holy Innocent's Episcopal church, in the same city. Both of them died on Sunday last. Dr. Mahan was a native of Nansemond county, Va., where he was born in 1819. Mr. Morrison was a native of Scotland, but came to this country when quite young, and was educated at the Alexander's Theological Seminary. He was about forty-eight years of age.

The six New England States, with a voting population, it is thought, less than that of Ohio, have a representation in Congress of twelve Senators and twenty-seven Congressmen, while the latter State has only two Senators and nineteen Representatives.

MOUNTAIN SCENERY IN NORTH CAROLINA AND VIRGINIA.

A few months ago we called the attention of our readers to an article in Appleton's Journal recommending the artists of the country to visit the unexplored mountain regions of Virginia and North Carolina and to transfer their beauties to canvass for the benefit of pleasure seekers and lovers of the grand and picturesque. The article has elicited several letters to the Journal on that subject, two of which, possessing unusual interest, appear in the number of August 27. One of these, dated Cambridge, Massachusetts, speaking of the scenery of Western North Carolina, says: "I have been there for years, and assure any one from real knowledge that neither the Catskill, Green, nor White Mountains can begin to compare with those of Western North Carolina. Where the Blue Ridge, Cumberland and Alleghenies unite they form a perfect Switzerland in America; many European gentlemen have declared in favor of this, and you will find English, Scotch and French families among these immortal hills."

The second letter is from Giles county, in this State, and gives a graphic description of the view from Bald Knob, from which can be seen a general landscape rivaling that from Mount Washington.

Commenting upon these, the Journal says: "We shall soon see hotels and mountain houses springing up on eligible points amid these grand hills, and the travel that now sets so persistently towards the Catskills and Adirondacks, in part at least, diverted to this region." It further announces that it has sent a special artist on a tour through the South whose illustrations will soon appear in its pages.

We feel convinced that the representations of the Journal's correspondents are not overdrawn, and hope the day is not far distant when the scenes they describe shall be better known and appreciated. In these days of travel and sight-seeing the mountain regions of Virginia and North Carolina, abounding in grand and beautiful scenery, must become more attractive in future to tourists and visitors of cultivated taste in proportion as the facilities for reaching them are improved.

THE ENFORCEMENT ACT.

The Baltimore Sun publishes the opinion of Judge Hugh L. Bond, of the United States District Court, in reference to the act of Congress of May 31st, 1870, for the enforcement of the Fifteenth Amendment of the Constitution of the United States. The Judge holds that it was not the intention of Congress to abolish the laws of the several States which prescribe the qualification of voters, or even to alter them, except so far as such qualifications are founded upon race, color or previous condition of servitude. He quotes the first section of the statute, which declares that it relates to "all citizens of the United States who are or shall be otherwise qualified to vote," and says that the meaning of this language is, that these citizens shall be qualified to vote by the laws of the State, or Territory, and that these persons without distinction or account of race, color or previous condition of servitude. Hence, it was decided that a registering officer, who in accordance with the Election law of West Virginia had refused to enter the name of a white citizen who had participated in the "Rebellion," was not liable under the act of Congress. The Judge also decided that the act of Congress only operated on the officers of any election at which any Representative or delegate in Congress shall be voted for, and the registering officer was not such an officer.

A UNITED GERMANY.

The Tribune says: After all, the notable fact of the war is not that each side is enthusiastic, or that splendid armaments are used, or that all Europe seems merging upon the struggle. The notable fact is that King William, at the Prussian headquarters, commands the army of United Germany. The dream of German philosophers and statesmen for a century has been accomplished by the rude stroke of Benedetti's diplomacy in an hour. The soldiers of Bavaria, Wurtemberg and the petty German States, that a year ago would almost as soon have thought of fighting under the French tri-color as beneath the Prussian eagle, now accept the orders of the Crown Prince as if they were already a part of the Prussian nationality. The battles to be fought may be lost or won by Prussia, but the grand issue of the war is already won. German unity, from the day that the troops of the smaller German governments were turned over to King William, was an accomplished fact.

FORGIVENESS.

The brave only know how to forgive. It is the most refined and generous pitch of virtue human nature can arrive at. Cowards have done good and kind actions, even have been found, nay, sometimes even conquered; but a coward never forgives. It is not his nature. The power of doing it flows out of a strength and greatness of the soul, conscious of its own force and security, and above the little temptations of resenting every fruitless attempt to interrupt its happiness. This is as true as preaching. Let any one skeptical notice and profit by his judgment.

The Empress Eugenie and her son, the Prince imperial, are living at Hastings in England, secluded from society.

DEATH OF EPISCOPAL CLEGGY.

The Baltimore papers announce the death of Rev. Milo Mahan, D. D., rector of St. Paul's church in that city, and one of the most eminent of the clergy of the Episcopal church in this country; also the death of Rev. George R. Morrison, rector of Holy Innocent's Episcopal church, in the same city. Both of them died on Sunday last. Dr. Mahan was a native of Nansemond county, Va., where he was born in 1819. Mr. Morrison was a native of Scotland, but came to this country when quite young, and was educated at the Alexander's Theological Seminary. He was about forty-eight years of age.

The six New England States, with a voting population, it is thought, less than that of Ohio, have a representation in Congress of twelve Senators and twenty-seven Congressmen, while the latter State has only two Senators and nineteen Representatives.

MOUNTAIN SCENERY IN NORTH CAROLINA AND VIRGINIA.

A few months ago we called the attention of our readers to an article in Appleton's Journal recommending the artists of the country to visit the unexplored mountain regions of Virginia and North Carolina and to transfer their beauties to canvass for the benefit of pleasure seekers and lovers of the grand and picturesque. The article has elicited several letters to the Journal on that subject, two of which, possessing unusual interest, appear in the number of August 27. One of these, dated Cambridge, Massachusetts, speaking of the scenery of Western North Carolina, says: "I have been there for years, and assure any one from real knowledge that neither the Catskill, Green, nor White Mountains can begin to compare with those of Western North Carolina. Where the Blue Ridge, Cumberland and Alleghenies unite they form a perfect Switzerland in America; many European gentlemen have declared in favor of this, and you will find English, Scotch and French families among these immortal hills."

The second letter is from Giles county, in this State, and gives a graphic description of the view from Bald Knob, from which can be seen a general landscape rivaling that from Mount Washington.

Commenting upon these, the Journal says: "We shall soon see hotels and mountain houses springing up on eligible points amid these grand hills, and the travel that now sets so persistently towards the Catskills and Adirondacks, in part at least, diverted to this region." It further announces that it has sent a special artist on a tour through the South whose illustrations will soon appear in its pages.

We feel convinced that the representations of the Journal's correspondents are not overdrawn, and hope the day is not far distant when the scenes they describe shall be better known and appreciated. In these days of travel and sight-seeing the mountain regions of Virginia and North Carolina, abounding in grand and beautiful scenery, must become more attractive in future to tourists and visitors of cultivated taste in proportion as the facilities for reaching them are improved.
