peet that the ordinary statement of Huber and other eminent aplarians, with regard to the antipathy of bees, under all circumstances, to change queens, was correct. Emisent writers have supposed that it would not be safe to introduce even a queen cell to a colony until twenty-four

In experimenting with Italian bees, shortly after their introduction to this country, I soon ascertained that this was an entire mistake, and that queen cells could be safely introduced, under ordinary circumstances, immediately after the removal of the queen.* This led me to experiment further in the same direction. young queen in the colony might reconeffe them at once to her presence, I introduced to queculess colonies cells, the lids of which were being grawed open by the after the cells were inserted, and I found them to be numbered, although the hive after the cells were inserted, and I found them to be numelested, although the hive which made the bees disposed to disturb them. Therefore, after unqueening the hive, I introduced just hatched queens at ceived. The bees would occasionally seem to manifest some surprise at their presence, and probably, if they could have said inquiringly - "does your mother know you are out?"

If the queens are too young, they were sometimes dragged out of the hive, just as imperfect bees are removed by workers. I next discovered that, in many instances these young queens could be put upon the very comb where the old mother was, and yet be undisturbed by the bees. In order to test the matter more thoroughly, after introducing a just hatched queen and finding her wall received, I would place upon the same comb an unfertile queen several days old. The bees would at once attack her furiously, confine, and speedily destroy her. It would seem, therefore, that under ordinary circumstances, young queens which have not yet attained their proper color, and perhaps the power of piping, may be introduced at once to queenless colonies. I have availed myself of this discovery largely, in breeding Italian queens; it being a communon practice with me as soon as the queen of a nucleus has laid a suitable number of eggs to test her purity, to cage her, and at once introduce a queen not more than five or six hours old. It may be that it would be safe to introduce queens even a day old but my practhe young queen thus introduced becomes fortile, and has laid a proper number of eggs, I cage her in turn and introduce and satisfactorily supplied by "The Patriot." still another. And thus I am able, with Occasionally I have known the workers to destroy these young queens, if not immediately, still within a few hours after their introduction. I do not, therefore, recommend the practice above described F. Stone, M. C., R. T. M. L. J. Randall, M. C., C. C. Denver, F. Stone, M. C., R. T. Merrick, N. L. In order, at times, to secure a suitable number of queens for this purpose, I have Ky; CA Sheate, Tenn; E Wells, Mo; CA been accustomed to condense into one Eldridge, Wis; E.M. These same combs may be returned at night to their proper nucleus.

The expert will know how to avail himself of the plan which I have suggested, and how to modify them to suit his circumstances .- L. L. LANGSTROTH, Oxford, Ohio, in American Bee Journal. -
