PRACTICAL THOUGHTS.

"Words filly spoken," according to the proverb, " are like apples of gold in pietures of silver." The following to the Grace teaches us, in the midst of life's greatest comforts, to be willing to die, They combine Immense Power, Equality, and in the midst of its greatest crosses to be willing to live.

The best thing to give your enemy is forgiveness; to your opponent tolerance; to a friend, your heart; to your child, a good example; to a father, deference; to your mother, conduct that will make her proud of her son ; to yourself, respect ; to all men, charity ; to God, obedience.

A noble and true life is the only pre paration that you need for death-it is invited to examine these Pianos before making the only passport that will secure your admission into the "holy of holics" of their selections elsewhere. the angle world. Prepare to live, and yout need have no fears of the Death Angel. The good and true need have no fear of death.

A straw will make an impression on the virgin snow, let it remain but a short time, and horse's boof can scarcely penetrate it. So it is with the youthful mind A triffing word may make an impression ter a few years the most nowerfur appears cease to influence. Think of this, ye who have the training of the infant mind, and leave such impressions the follies and temptations of the world.

Be loyal to the nature you bear, conseerate your lives to every good and noble work, faithfully labor for the elevation and perfection of our common humanity, and the angles will sweetly smile on you, and you will be happy, both in this life and that which is beyond the grave. If with sunshine and happiness.

It is a great thing for a young man to find out early that he is of the minimum of importance in the world; that while i demands of him everything that he can do, it can get on admirably without him. missed-bless you, he never has been recognized! Don't forget the mistake made by the fly on the coach-wheel, nor the disaster that overtook the frog. Do all you can; sink all selfish thought of self; and compel out of you the best that is in

BLINDNESS. - Aldrovandus speaks of a sculptor who, though he had been blind for ten years, yet made a perfect marble statue of Cosmo IL, de Medicia. Bartholin mentions a blind sculptor of Denmark, who distinguished different colors and kinds of wood by the sense of touch. Dr. Bew says that one John Metcalf, who became blind at a very early age, was a good road surveyor. Democritus is said to have pre out his eyes, so that he might think more intensely. Dr. Saunderson, of Cambridge University, England, who was deprived of sight in infancy, could distinguish genuine from false Roman medajs, when the eye could not; could tell when the sun was behind a cloud; could distinguish one-fifth of a musical tone, and judge accurately the size of a

Patience is always crowned with success. This is a rule without an exception. It may not be splendid success. but patience never takes anything in hand that it does not succeed with in some form. The great Tartar conqueror, Timour, is said to have learned this important lesson from an ant. He saw one day this insect striving to draw over a stone a grain of corn as large as its own body, and just as it got it up, the grain fell from its grasp, and the attempt had to be made again. The process was re peated sixty-nine times, and in the sever tieth time the ant surmounted the obstacle. "This is a lesson," said the wise and wary monarch, "for me"-end it is lesson for us.

Much of the unhappiness in this world arises from giving utterance to hasty, un kind words. Many a sorrowful hour and sleepless night have been spent brooding over some harsh or angry word, which unguarded passion. How much pain we would save ourselves and others if we would guard all our ways and actions .-Kind words, spoken in the right time and place, do more to heal the wounded spiri than all the gold this world can give .-They cost nothing, while they enrich the heart and scatter sunshine all around, winning many true and faithful friends.

How to Judge the Weather by the Clouds .- The colors of the sky at different times afford wonderfully good guidance. Not only does a bright sunset presage fair weather, but there are other tints which speak with clearness and accuracy. A bright yellowin the evening indicates wind; a pale yellow wet; a neutral gray color constitutes à favorable sign in the evening - an unfavorable one in the morning. The clouds are full of meaning in themselves. If they are soft, nndefined and feathery, the weather will be fine; if the edges are hard, sharp and definite, it will be joul. Generally speaking, any deep, unusual hues betoken wind and rain, while the more quiet and delicate tints bespeak fair weather. Simple as these maxims are, the British Board of Trade has thought fit to publish them for petition" the use of sea-faring men.
