Notes And News From Here And There About Cleveland County People You Know

AN "OFFICE FOR RENT" sign will soon be hanging over the door of the office of Clyde R. Hoey who is rapidly preparing to read his morning mail over a desk at Raleigh. Attorney Joe Whisnant will continue to work in the adjoining office, but the law firm of Ryburn and Hoey, attorneys at law, will be discontinued for at least four years.

JOE WHISNANT AND HENRY EDWARDS are wondering whether to thank each other. Henry got a bill for Joe from a local garage and was about to pay it. Investigation showed that the garageman thought Joe favors Henry. They can't decide.

THIS COLUMN HAS just about decided that for one group of girls in the city, the boys are going to have to be a little bolder, to give 'em thrills. In their week-end thrill seeking four or five of the sweet young things enclose themselves in a big car, lock the doors and drive slowly around in the cemetery, peering out at the moving shadows. It would be too bad some night if the engine should stop.

YOU WONT believe this, and we didn't either, but today we saw a persimmon more than four inches in diameter and weighing a little over two pounds. It was brought to the office by W. A. Broadway, who said a relative of a Mr. Hendricks sent it from Florida. It is a large variety of a Japanese persimmon. It will grow here, but not nearly so large.

IT IS "DR. TURNER" NOW. Shine Boy Turner who plays the tunes on shoes for Roy Propst's Union shop has really gone classy in a big way. He is a "masseur", whatever that may be. What he says he is planning to do is give a sort of Turkish bath—that is a hot shower.

SOME ONE asked this column a short time ago why writers always use the "editorial we," and what it means. No one has ever surpassed Mark Twain in an answer for that: "It means me and my tapeworm."

Reynolds Wants To Help State Like Other Folks

RALEIGH, Dec. 7.—The following story appeared in the current issue of The Technician, student newspaper at State college under a credit line of Hall Morrison, Charlotte, editor of the paper: "R. J. (Dick) Reynolds, State college's richest alumnus, doesn't see why he can't help his alma mater just as does any other alumnus. "Reynolds was interviewed at Winston-Salem yesterday concerning his part in athletics here by Lloyd N. Brown, president of the student body; Charles Matthews, vice president of the student body and myself. He spoke at some length on his opinions of State college's affairs in the morning. Then later in the day, he together with his attorney, Stratton Coyner, decided to issue a printed statement from his office to clarify the situation and lay clear the stand he takes on it.

Previously it had been known that Reynolds was the largest contributor to the Delaware loan fund, but as to his purpose in setting it up, rumor was rife, and as to how it was administered, rumors flew even faster.

Reynolds' statement of policies both past and present is as follows: "My name has apparently been drawn into controversies unnecessarily at State college. I wish to take no part in any such controversies."

Need Understanding He Tells Big Banquet

"Lack of understanding has done more to tear down than all of man's efforts to build up," said Professor J. H. Grigg, Superintendent of Cleveland County Schools, at Ellenboro in Rutherford county, when he addressed 100 persons who attended the annual father-son and mother-daughter banquet given by the vocational agricultural and home economics students of the local school in honor of their parents.

"I very much regret if any action upon my part has contributed or caused any discussion evident at State college."

Mr. Grigg announced his subject to be: "Human Understanding," at the very beginning of his inspiring address to the parents and students and then went on to show that class hatred, strikes and wars are caused from misunderstandings. "Misunderstanding is our problem today," was another statement made by him during the course of his address.

"Being an alumnus of State college I have, in the past, taken a certain amount of interest in its athletics, solely with a desire to be helpful."

Professor Curtis Price who heads the Ellenboro school introduced Professor Grigg while A. B. Bushong, teacher of agriculture for the school, acted as toastmaster. Miss Roberta Harrill of the home economics department gave the toast to the mothers and Mrs. Eldon Hamrick responded. The toast to the fathers was given by Durward Hamrick of the agricultural department. Mr. O. R. Coffield responded to this toast.

"I have been making contributions to a student loan fund, which is available to aid any worthy student in securing an education. The fact that this fund has not been administered by the college authorities has, it seems, been a contributing cause to the present unfortunate misunderstanding. Therefore, I wish it to become known that I have not been the sole contributor of this fund and have taken no part in its administration."

Mis Louise Wilkie, Nancy Blanton and Jessie Pearl Kendrick sang songs honoring father and mother. Music was furnished by Gaston's orchestra of Ellenboro.

THE loan fund to which Reynolds referred is the Delaware Student Loan Fund, incorporated, a non-profit making corporation chartered under the laws of the state of Delaware. Reynolds is said to be by far the largest single contributor to the fund. He said that he had agreed to contribute a stated amount over a period of three years. His contributions began in 1934, and the end of this year brings to a close the three year period.

State's richest alumnus stated that unfortunately he had been largely out of contact with State college in the last few years, and therefore was in many ways unfamiliar with any events taking place here.

He said that any financial transactions involved by his contributions were handled by Stratton Coyner, and that aside from the fact that he was contributing, he knew nothing of the administration of the funds.

The three who interviewed Reynolds felt that he held in many respects the key to the situation, and that a statement by him setting forth his views would give to

JUNE ROBLES CASE REOPENED

Sensational developments were promised when the federal grand jury at Tucson, Ariz., reopens its investigation into the strange kidnaping of little June Robles two and a half years ago. More than a week after she vanished from home, the child was found buried in a sheet iron box on the desert but she was rescued unhurt. Now nine years old, June is shown playing with her favorite doll. (Associated Press Photo).

Choral Club Plans Amateur Program

The Cleveland Choral club will present an entertainment of local talent in the school auditorium Monday night, Dec. 17, 1936 at 8 o'clock. The program will consist of readings, popular song hits and latest dance numbers. Several prizes will be awarded. A small admission will be charged.

The annual "Turkey contest," which has been in progress will end Tuesday night, Dec. 8, at 8 o'clock in the auditorium. The class reporting the largest sum of money will receive a turkey. The "Cleveland Revue" will be the attraction of the evening. There will be no admission charge.

A 40 year old federal statute brought fines of $50 each to seven skippers of fishing boats for "obstructing navigation" in New York harbor.

The University of Santa Clara was founded by the mission fathers in 1777.

Reviewing Stand Designed For Roosevelt Inauguration

WASHINGTON, Dec. 7.—The stand from which President Roosevelt will review his second inaugural parade on Jan. 20 will be designed along the lines of the Hermitage, home of Andrew Jackson, near Nashville, Tennessee. The President gave his approval to the construction of such a stand in front of the White House shortly before leaving on his South American cruise. The design was submitted by Waddy B. Wood, Washington architect, who four years ago drew plans for the reviewing stand modeled after the Federal Hall in New York city, where George Washington took the oath of office.

Special booths will be erected for radio commentators side the Capitol for use in case weather forbids an outdoor ceremony. Hotels are rapidly closing their reservation lists; railroads and lines are completing arrangements for special trains to bring in numbers of people; and a little bureau will be set up to assist visitors in finding rooms in private houses.

Parade Permitted Considerable difficulty is being experienced by the President in holding down the enthusiasm of those who want to stage an elaborate inauguration celebration to match the size of the election victory. Mr. Roosevelt has expressed preference for simple ceremonies. He left word behind that he would consent to a "parade of sorts" and the construction of "not too costly" reviewing stands. Thus far he has been adamant against proposals for an inaugural ball.

Enthusiasm The type of pressure Mr. Roosevelt must resist if he is to adhere to his present plan for a simple inauguration is exemplified in a statement made by Daniel C. Brer, Secretary of Commerce: "I have never seen a time when there was so much enthusiasm for President Roosevelt as there is the moment. I do not see how there can be an inauguration without tremendous expression of this enthusiastic spirit."

Inaugural chairman has yet been appointed by the President, but plans are going forward to spend $35,000 set aside by the last session of Congress for the construction of an inaugural platform at the Capitol and a "court of honor" at the White House. Another $25,000 has been set aside for the use of the District of Columbia Commissioners in caring for the safety and convenience of inaugural visitors.

Malcolm S. McConihe, Democratic National Committeeman for District of Columbia, declared: "The people of the nation most enthusiastic in their demand for appropriate festivities on Inauguration Day. I sincerely hope President will not insist on simple program he first outlined."

Inauguration planners are taking the possibility of inclement weather into consideration more than ever before, because of the switch in the date from March 4 to Jan. 20. Carpenters are already putting a wooden "overcoat" on the Capitol steps where thousands will gather to hear the President's inaugural address.

Malcolm S. McConihe, Democratic National Committeeman for District of Columbia, declared: "The people of the nation most enthusiastic in their demand for appropriate festivities on Inauguration Day. I sincerely hope President will not insist on simple program he first outlined."
