

MAYOR ISSUES PROCLAMATION

Citizens of Shelby are asked to assemble at the courthouse within one hour after the official surrender of Germany in a proclamation issued this morning by Mayor Harry Woodson. At this meeting a special prayer service will be held. Mayor Woodson also called on beer and wine dealers to refrain from the sale of either of these beverages.

If the surrender proclamation comes at night, the meeting at the courthouse will be held at 10 o'clock the following morning.

The full proclamation follows: "Whereas, all evidence and information point to the rapid approach of V-E Day, at which time all hostilities will cease in the European Theatre of War; and

"Whereas, on that day a great many of our people will feel inclined to celebrate and to let go of their pent up emotions in various and sundry manner, some of which will undoubtedly prove to be not only untimely, but disgusting, irreverent and unparliamentary; and

"Whereas, it is the earnest desire of most of our good people to observe this day in a prayerfully thanksgiving manner;

"Now, therefore, I, Harry S. Woodson, Mayor of the City of Shelby, do proclaim V-E Day as a day to be observed in a respectfully quiet and prayerful way and I, therefore, call on all places of business selling wine and beer to show their reverence and patriotism on this day by refraining from the sale of either of these beverages. I call also on all the ministers in the city of Shelby, and all the citizens who care to attend, to assemble at the court house within one hour after the official announcement of the surrender of Germany, there to hold a meeting and offer prayer to Almighty God for the merciful cessation of the European phase of this bloody conflict.

"Done at the city hall of the City of Shelby, this the third day of May in the year of our Lord, nineteen hundred forty-five."

said afterward there may be a agreement this weekend.

This is one of the big gaps left in the plan worked out at Dumbarton Oaks last fall. Chief American interest focused on finding a way to allow this country to retain control of military bases built or to be developed on Pacific islands won from Japan with American lives.

Paralleling the nine American objectives announced by Stassen yesterday for changes in the Dumbarton Oaks plan, the British were reported to have these six objectives in mind for amendments:

1. A preamble to the Dumbarton Oaks charter to set forth the high moral purposes and endorsements of human rights to which the world organization would be committed. (For this the British favor a statement proposed by Prime Minister Jan Christian Smuts of South Africa.)

2. A provision to make certain that the organization has enough flexibility to handle any troublesome international situations which arise. (The United States proposal to give it specific power to review treaties probably will serve the British purpose.)

3. A provision to allow scope for regional action to maintain peace without impairing the prestige of the security council or weakening the Dumbarton Oaks principle that the security of all nations can best be maintained on a world-wide rather than a regional basis.

4. Elevation of the social and economic council to have equal importance with the security council. Under the Dumbarton Oaks plan, the economic council is subordinate to the general assembly of nations; the security council outranks the assembly.

5. A provision allowing a world organization, once it is set up, to work out some rule whereby the so-called middle powers—like Australia, Canada and Brazil—would be assured of places on the security council in recognition of their military prestige.

6. A system of trusteeships for dependent territories which are considered international responsibilities.

Lay Heavier Rails On Seaboard Track, Shelby To Bostic

Repair crews on the Seaboard Airline Railway have completed laying heavier rails between Bostic and Shelby. The old rail weighing 75 pounds per foot has been taken up and replaced with new 100-pound rail.

This completes the heavier rail laying on this branch of the Seaboard from Bostic east through Charlotte. From Shelby east the heavier rail was laid some years ago and is being done in order to provide for the use of heavier engines and perhaps eliminate the necessity of using lighter double-header engines, carrying coal shipments east which are picked up from the Clinchfield at the Bostic yards.

don their position. "The enemy, deceived as to the disposition and the size of the forces facing them because of Sgt. Martin's skillful placement of fire, quickly moved their main body to the rear. This maneuver allowed Sgt. Martin's comrades to rush forward and capture twenty prisoners.

"Sgt. Martin's gallant efforts removed a serious threat to his company's position. His combat skill, courage under fire and devotion to duty exemplify the high traditions of the Infantry and the United States Army."

Sgt. Martin, who made his home here with his uncle and aunt, by whom he was reared, entered the Army in November, 1942 and after completing his training in the United States sailed for an overseas station in February, 1944. CAPTURE

Admiral Karl Doenitz, was reported to have fled to Kiel, where a Stockholm dispatch said he, his new foreign minister, Count Ludwig Schwering von Kroeging; Werner Best, German minister to Denmark; and Josef Terboven, Nazi commissioner for Norway, were in conference.

The Swedish central news agency quoted "usually reliable sources" as saying that Doenitz and Field Marshal Montgomery would meet or already were meeting at Kiel or in Denmark, and that Best, Terboven and Col. Gen. Georg Lindemann, Nazi commander in Denmark, possibly were there. Reuters also carried a report to this effect.

IN COPENHAGEN — But the BBC said it had reliable information the Doenitz government had moved to Copenhagen and that Doenitz was there. A similar report was carried in a broadcast attributed by Allied Monitors to the Luxembourg radio.

The Paris radio said both Doenitz and Heinrich Himmler, chief of the vanishing Gestapo, had approached the Allies again, offering to surrender what is left of the German army to Britain, Russia and the United States.

Of Germany proper, all that the Allies could not call conquered was a little bulge in the Elbe river area east of Magdeburg, and a tightening salient around the last of the northwest German cities and the Schleswig Holstein peninsula which leads to Denmark.

These either were corridors of retreat or pockets of surrender—surrender at so vast a rate that the Allies were losing count.

flame it is impossible to see much."

Hermann Goering's air ministry likewise was abuzz. The dispatch said "It is impossible to get a fix on it, but the gigantic scale is intact."

Flames still licked at other buildings, and in the Tiergarten trees crackled and swayed in the heat blasts.

Izvestia's correspondent said: "I have been asking the question 'Where is Hitler?' of German prisoners. They all answer 'Hitler and Goebbles committed suicide.'"

Looking was rampant. There was no way of telling what the population of Berlin was at the moment, but unofficial estimates put it at not much under 5,000,000 for the metropolitan area.

The Red army set up army bakeries for the people and put thousands of prisoners to work clearing the streets.

Red Star Correspondents Lt. Col. Leonid Vysokostrovsky and Pavel Troyanovsky gave graphic pictures of Berlin after the surrender.

"Ruins, craters, smashed streets, street cars on their sides, fresh graves, German bodies still not buried, white flags, throngs of gloomy, starving inhabitants. Such is Berlin today," they wrote.

The Wilhelmstrasse, the street which was lined by government buildings, was piled high with surrendered German arms and down it were moving columns of German prisoners.

"One can't walk or ride on Unter Den Linden," they added. "Nine rows of fallen trees were placed across it at one place with sandbags stacked behind them. Through this we saw Red flags flying from the Soviet and French embassies."

Dispatches said the Reichstag still was smoking, with the roofs of the halls caved in but the skeleton of the Cupola still standing and atop it the Red banner.

"I saw an old German digging in ruins," said one of the Izvestia correspondents, "and asked what he was looking for. 'My family,' he replied. Fairly soon 10 persons came crawling from the ruins."

WORK NIGHT, DAY — The Russian reporters said registration of Nazis had commenced in Berlin and Russian experts were working night and day to get gas, water, light and communication services working. Soviet specialists were being landed at Tempelhof airfield to push repairs.

Correspondents entering the underground headquarters of the German general staff said they found evidence that the officers left but one telegrapher to answer calls when they fled.

At the machines where he worked they found the ribbons bearing his last messages which told in a unique manner the story of the last hours of the capital. Some of them were:

"I have an urgent message for Oslo."

"Very sorry, we are not transmitting any more. You see in a few hours we shall be closing down."

"Is there nobody in Berlin who could be sent with a dispatch?"

"No."

"ALL RATTLED" — "My God, what is happening?" "We've fought ourselves to a standstill."

ENEMY

Swedish reports said that the British Second army—which captured 500,000 of the routed enemy in the last two days—had invaded that kingdom. The Germans themselves proclaimed Kiel and Flensburg open cities and indicated their fall was near.

One unconfirmed report from the Swedish newspaper Aftonbladet said it was believed that Grand Admiral Karl Doenitz was negotiating with Field Marshal Montgomery at Flensburg for surrender.

What Germans survived that catastrophe in the north were attempting a hurried land and sea flight toward the uncertain refuge of Norway.

The Seventh Army of Lt. Gen. Alexander M. Patch joined Lt. Gen. Lucian Truscott's victorious Fifth army at Cliteno in the Brenner pass ten miles south of the snow-heaped Italian frontier.

The Seventh army captured Innsbruck, capital of the Tyrol and fourth largest city of Austria. The Cactus (103rd) division received a tumultuous ovation there last night before rolling on south through the Brenner pass to join the Fifth army in Italy.

Half a million Germans had surrendered in 48 hours to the British Second army and at least three attached American divisions in the north.

The Germans who had not surrendered north of fallen Hamburg were in chaotic flight by land and sea toward Norway, where the shadowy Doenitz regime may make its last stand about the bases of the submarines the admiral once commanded.

Planes and tanks and artillery all turned the German flight into a debacle of burning ships and wrecked land transport. Diehard Nazis were driven into the sea.

Virtually all of Germany was conquered. The last Nazi holdings were shrinking pockets, untenable and beyond hope of relief.
