Case Protests Running Of Derby

WASHINGTON, May 12—(AP)—Rep. Case (R-SD) said today that if the Kentucky Derby can be held again in war time then church and patriotic organizations should be able to hold conventions.

In a letter to War Mobilizer Fred M. Vinson, Case said that since the ban on horse racing and the curfew on night clubs have been lifted, he believed Vinson should "kindly direct" lifting the bans on: 1. Regular church conventions and conferences.

2. Regular conventions of patriotic organizations such as the American Legion, Veterans of Foreign Wars, Spanish War Veterans and their Auxiliaries.

Lowry R. Wilson, Jr., Killed In Action

LOWELL—Mr. and Mrs. Lowry R. Wilson have received from the war department the news informing them of the death in action against the enemy of their oldest son, Lowry Reid Wilson, Jr., somewhere in Germany. "Pinky," as he was affectionately known, was born on February 13, 1922, and spent his young life in Lowell, attending the Lowell school, from which he was graduated. From early youth he was fond of travel and took many interesting and educational trips. After his graduation from Hargrave military academy in Chatham, Va., he entered Davidson college. He joined the enlisted reserves of the army while at Davidson on June 15, 1942.

Picture For Nazis Changes In Two Years

By HAL BOYLE

PILSEN, Czechoslovakia, May 11—(AP)—Two years ago this week, thousands of Field Marshal Rommel's famed Afrika Korps troops rode the dusty trail to defeat and a vast war prisoner's camp in the wheat fields outside Bizerte.

They came in proud and arrogant, still very much a fighting army and unconvinced that they were beaten. They had backtracked 1,400 miles from El Alamein in one of the superb marches of military history. But at last the British and American forces had pushed them to the sea. That sea was controlled by Allied ships. With their supply lines cut and no way for them to get food and ammunition, the Nazis had to yield.

Africa was lost. But these young Nazis—hardened by desert marches and still in top physical condition—regarded Africa as only a small gamble.

"What is Africa to us?" they asked when you talked to them. "We still have Europe. We shall always have it. You will never be able to break into Europe through our Fuehrer's west wall."

When one lanky American ventured to suggest that not only Europe would be invaded but that Germany herself would be fought through and occupied, Rommel's tan-clad desert warriors laughed at him in complete incredulity.

"No allied soldier ever will set foot in the fatherland," one said positively. "It is impossible—unthinkable. You do not know the power of our army."

That was two years ago. The finale to their boast has been written. There is no corner of their beautiful "fatherland" that is not under Allied control.

It was a far different German column that marched from Prague to Pilsen after the windup of the last major fighting in Europe. Women and children were in this long line. Whole German families uprooted by the fear of Russian and Czech retaliation were walking back to the Reich, bringing their Nazi ideals and culture with them.

TO OLD FRONTIERS They were moving back with their beaten army to the old frontiers through which they burst almost six years ago with their cries for more "Lebensraum."

Some German farm families traveled in old horse-drawn carts with canvas tops like the "Forty-Niners." But for most of the soldiers and their camp followers it was a foot hike. Some took off their shoes and walked bare-footed down the long highway. They were dirty, dusty, tired, hungry and dispirited. Only among the young, pampered SS troops who rode in their own vehicles were the signs of the old Nazi jauntiness. And by the time these men reached American front line posts and had surrendered their weapons, most of them had lost their cockiness. An SS man without his guns looks pretty much like the next fellow.

In one field were some 5,000 German women with their children. They were washing their aching feet in a small stream, stretching out wearily for naps under the blazing sun or merely sitting on the grass staring blankly in tired indecision. Some had collapsed from the heat of the 56-mile march and were being treated under an open tent by American medics.

CZECHS' TURN From all parts of the field came the querulous cries of fretful babies and children. They were German children crying for food and attention—children who knew something was wrong and with the quick perception of childhood caught up their mothers' fright and uncertainty. One Czech mother who saw this crowded field of anxious German women wasn't very sympathetic. "It is bad that any children have to cry," she said. "But if some children must cry it is the turn of German children. They will be hungry at most for only a few hours. But our Czech children have had to do without proper food for six years. There were oranges for German children in Czechoslovakia, but none for Czech children. Now it is our turn to feed oranges to our babies."
