There were a few Jap prisoners and some Chinese from Formosa (is that likely?) digging the graves. There's quite a different technique used in handling prisoners out here. I've been out here eight months and had never seen a Jap, so I walked over closer to them, a little Filipino trailing close behind me. I stood there, you know, hands on hips, a cocky entry on my face, and a general air of arrogance around me, watching them dig.

"I turned to the little boy who still had said nothing, and with the same dialect I use on all foreigners, regardless of the language they speak, I asked him his opinion. This means getting a foreigner to understand me is sort of a cross between pig latin and baby talk with numerous gestures of the face, body, and limbs. The conversation went like this:

"Do you like those jerks—big buddies? All the while I was making motions and using words of endearment.

"He looked up at me with about the same expression you'd get if you asked a mule for a light.

I tried again. "You hate those fellows—want to kill them?"

He looked up at me with a big grin: "You right, Jackson!" he responded.

WHILE WE'RE IN THE PACIFIC there is another story to tell. Pvt. Joe Thompson, who is on his way to somewhere out there, and A. V. Irvin, both Shelby soldiers, discovered each other on the same transport ship. They are not in the same group because Joe is with the motorized corps, while A. V. is in on the engineering part—it was coincidence enough to be on the same ship. Both hastened to write home about what happened and the thrill it gave them.

DO YOU KNOW HOW THEY test the strength of coffee on destroyers, by the way? Capt. Abercrombie, USN, author of "My Life to the Destroyers" says coffee is exactly right if it will float an iron wedge. Down in the engine room standards are different. The coffee those boys brew will eat up an iron edge and take the paint off bulkheads. (Walls, to you.) A. A. bulksaga.

LATELY THE DISCUSSION OF which is better, "to browse" or "to browse around," has been popping up intermittently in my presence. For instance, if you owned a shop, would you invite people in "to browse" or "to browse around"? When you think of browsing you usually think of books, but is browsing limited only to books?

According to Webster the word, "browse," used intransitively, means 1) to feed on or crop browse. Loosely, to graze, or 2) To read passages here and there in a book.

FROM THE PACIFIC MY COUSIN, ROGERS THOMAS, writes of a conversation with a Filipino which still arouses little chuckles in me. Rogers has been stationed on a hospital ship in the Pacific for about eight months now, but he hasn't learned any of the dialects in that area.

The conversation took place on Formosa where the ship had paused to bury a patient who had died aboard.

or collection of books. "Browse about or around" is used to mean "to move here and there pausing to browse."

Either phrase would be correct, according to Webster, if you were inviting people to look at books or you were planning to look at books when you said "browse." Plenty of people today are "browsing through" phonograph records, however, and "browsing around" antique shops, so Webster had better hurry to keep up with us.

C.; Drum quartet and the Melody Boys of Gastonia; Sisk quartet of Shelby; Liberty quartet of Caroleen; Willis trio of Mt. Holly; Hull quartet of Morganton and Fallston quartet of Fallston.

A loud speaker system will be installed by J. C. Telly in order that everyone may hear the singing.

CAP Swimming Party Honors Washburn
The swimming party for members of the local Civil Air Patrol at North Lake's pool last night was "all wet" so far as officers were concerned.

The youngsters got greatest delight pushing Capt. George Washburn and Lieut. Knox Hardin into the water where duckings were the order of the moment.

The outing, a part of the physical training program, had its serious moments, the cadets honoring Capt. Washburn's birthday by presenting him an appropriate gift.

The CAP members, 30 of whom enjoyed the swim, expressed today their thanks to the North Lake club members for extending use of the pool for the occasion.

City Delivery Of Mail For Spindale

BARBOUR LAUDS LEADERS HERE

"Shelby has taken its local government seriously and has done a magnificent job," declared Lt. Governor Jess Barbour of Morganton, making an official visit to the Shelby Kiwanis club last night.

Mr. Barbour was speaking on things not being exactly right in America, declaring there is too much religion, racial and political prejudice still prevalent in the land which we must get rid of if the nation is to continue on its upward surge.

"Greece once had the greatest civilization of that period but less than ten per cent of the population possessed the culture and the capacity for leadership. The aristocracy in the South was a great civilization but it was too restricted and exclusive. The masses did not belong to this group. They couldn't qualify because of educational and economic backwardness," said Mr. Barbour.

SPRIT, VISION
"Civic clubs have developed men who have the spirit, vision and capacity for leadership and today the civilization in the south is the highest in the world, taking all groups of people into consideration," he declared.

Mr. Barbour urged his hearers to take an interest in local government and not look to Washington and Raleigh for hand-outs. He said Shelby and Cleveland county have always done this and consequently the city and county are admired and respected for the leadership of its men and for its good government.

The speaker was introduced by Fred Blanton. Senator Clyde Hoy was present and in a brief talk, reported that the United Nations charter is the greatest document ever drafted by man and will undoubtedly be ratified by the Senate at an early date.

Ramey Bound Over On Breaking Count

Fred Ramey, charged with breaking and entering and larceny, was bound over when probable cause was found against him in Recorder's court this morning.

Ramey was charged with breaking into the home of Mitchell Grant and stealing a 22 rifle and other things, none of which was recovered excepting the rifle.

Willie B. Gardner, indicted with three companions for violating the prohibition law, claimed ownership of the liquor involved in all the cases and was given a six months' sentence, suspended on condition he pay $75 and costs and be of good behavior for two years.

The three others, Daisy Ross, Harvey Hopper and Tankston McCluney, were taxed with costs and placed on similar good behavior. Mildred Webb drew 30 days in jail for assaulting with a bottle Henry Lee Patterson, both colored.
