News Of Soil Conservation

By JOE N. CRAVER and W. I. SHOPE

Many farmers who are having terraces constructed are finding that subsiding the flow line and back side of the terrace channel is a paying proposition. This practice is recommended by the supervisor of the Broad River Soil Conservation District, Charlie Rhyme of the Stony Point community says, "Right after I had terraces built I had the channel subsided to a depth of about one foot. The water from recent heavy rains soaked into this subsoil area, thereby protecting the new terrace ridges."

Lloyd Wilson of the Fallston community has an acre of kudzu which should make some valuable hay in the future. He plans to apply superphosphate to the area and give it a thorough discing next spring. The fertilization will result in increased growth and the discing will make the stand thicker. Mr. Wilson says: "I have a high opinion of kudzu as a hay and grazing crop."

former, has seeded several acres to Austrian winter peas. "By using these peas, I am building up land which would otherwise be idle. Also, Austrian winter peas mixed with small grain makes much better hay than small grain alone," says Mr. Wilson.

Navy V-12, NROTC To End At Duke

DURHAM, N. C., Dec. 10.—(AP)—Formal notice of the termination of the navy V-12 and wartime naval reserve officer training corps has been received at Duke university from the navy department. The program will not be continued on its present basis after Jan. 15, although the navy V-5 aviation program is expected to continue until about next July 1.
