Turn a furrow of seven inches deep at the least, and the nearer it approaches to twelve inches, the better. There may be soils that form excentions to the rule of deep ploughing; and which require from some peculiarity in the sub-soil, a gradual deepening. In our own experience we have met none such. We have, without fear, thrown Jan. 21, 1859 .- 7-tf up four inches of the clay sub-soil, which had never seen the light before. on the surface of a bed of ten inches, and, with moderate manuring, made the best crop of corn the land had produced within the memory of living men. We look upon a deep soil as the very first requisite of the successful cultivation of almost every crop. Summer in the Union. crops, so very uncertain on a shallowsoil, are almost insured against the vicissitudes of the season in a deep one. We do not think the all important corn crop would fail of a good yield one year in twenty, planted on a bed of twelve inches in depth.

off their work in short lands, consume a very large proportion of time at the turnings. There is a strong predilection on the part of negro ploughmen to work the short way of a piece of ground, when they have their choice. A little observation and calculation will show the great advantage of ploughing in long lands.

On the tobacco plantation, the tobacco ground, if in sod, should be ploughed first; it is bad practice to leave this work till after corn-planting to save the labor of a second ploughing. This crop is of too much value to allow any risk of imperfect preparation, An early growth of plants may oblige you to hurry unduly; or a dry season make it very difficult to get the ground properly prepared at so late a period. If all be thoroughly broken 11-tf now, there will be no difficulty, after corn-planting, in putting it in the best HARRESS MAKING AT OLIM. order as fast as the plants are ready for setting out.
