Col. Singleton's s. h. Godolphin, 4 years old, sire Crumder, dam Slyph.

Wm. G. Horas, b. f. Rattle-snake, 3 years old, sire Bertrand, dam Paragon.

All the horses entered were known to the public advantageously. Rattle-snake, although least known, had made a fine run, and conceded the honor of the field with Sally Homer, at Savannah.

At the hour of twelve, the horses were brought upon the course—all were anxious to see them unclashed.—The step and air of Godolphin was imposing.

Rattle-snake was extremely restive, exhibiting fire spirit, and high mettle. The course was thronged with youth and age, beauty and fashion.

At the word go, all were off, Godolphin leading. Bertrand Jr. next, with Rattle-snake in the rear.

DOMESTIC.

INAUGURAL ADDRESS. OF THE PRESIDENT OF THE UNITED STATES. Fourth of March, 1833.

FELLOW CITIZENS: The will of the American people, expressed through their unaltered suffrages, calls me before you to pass through the solemnities preparatory to taking upon myself the duties of President of the United States, for another term.

So many events have occurred within the last four years, which have necessarily called forth, sometimes under circumstances the most delicate and painful, my views of the principles and policy which ought to be pursued by the General Government, that I need, on this occasion, but allude to a few leading considerations, connected with some of them.

The foreign policy adopted by our Government soon after the formation of our present Constitution, and very generally pursued by successive administrations, has been crowned with almost complete success, and has elevated our character among the nations of the earth.

In the domestic policy of this Government, there are a few objects which especially deserve the attention of the people and their Representatives, and which have been, and will continue to be, the subjects of my increasing solicitude.

These great objects are necessarily connected, and can only be attained by an enlightened exercise of the powers of each within its appropriate sphere, in conformity with the public will constitutionally expressed.

My experience in public concerns, and the observation of a life somewhat advanced, confirm the opinions long since imbibed by me, that the destruction of our State governments, or the annihilation of their control over the local concerns of the people, would lead directly to revolution and anarchy, and finally to despotism and military domination.

The bill from the Senate further to provide for the collection of duties on imports came up on its final passage, (the Previous Question thereon having been last night ordered.)

The question was decided as follows: Yeas.—Messrs. Adams, Chilton, Allan, Heman Allen, Allison, Anderson, Appleton, Armstrong, Ashley, Babbs, Noyes Barber, Barringer, Barstow, Isaac C. Bates, James Bates, Beardsley, Bell, Bergen, Bethune, James Blair, John Blair, Bouck, Briggs, John Broadhead, John C. who has kept us in his hands from the infancy of our Republic to the present day, that he will so overlook all my intentions and actions, and inspire the hearts of my fellow-citizens, that we may be preserved from dangers of all kinds, and continue forever a UNITED AND HAPPY PEOPLE.

FROM OUR CORRESPONDENT

WASHINGTON FEB. 23

There has been some rather sharp sparring to-day, in the Senate Chamber, in which Mr. CLAY, WEBSTER, and Mr. CLAYTON participated.

The Tariff Bill introduced by Mr. CLAY, being under discussion, in the course of an argument against some proposition to amend, called the Enforcing bill, which has gone to the other House, Mr. WEBSTER's Bill, and said that Mr. W. would have been willing to send that Bill into the Country to provoke discussion, and war, and bloodshed, but he had made no single proposition to conciliate the existing differences by the means of a modification of the Tariff.

Mr. WEBSTER said; that so far from not having offered any conciliatory propositions, it was well known that he had laid on the table a series of resolutions on the subject of the Tariff, in which he had proposed, if there had been any such action, to found a bill to modify the Tariff, by a descending gradation of specific duties.

At the hour of twelve, the horses were brought upon the course—all were anxious to see them unclashed.—The step and air of Godolphin was imposing.

At the word go, all were off, Godolphin leading. Bertrand Jr. next, with Rattle-snake in the rear.

FROM THE AUGUSTA (GA.) N. A. GAZETTE.

Several families removing from South Carolina crossed the Bridge, at this place, a few days ago. One individual of the company, a well-looking man, remarking on the change of residence he was making, said, that he, with his company, were determined to settle where they could enjoy the blessings of freedom—he had enjoyed, he said, the rights of a freeman ever since the close of the revolutionary war, until last November. The extraordinary Ordinance then passed in his State, and the laws, made to carry it into execution, had so changed his condition and his feelings as to the enjoyment of what he considered his privileges and his rights of conscience, that he had determined to leave the State, in which he had before supposed he was settled for life, and to seek a resting place somewhere to the West, where the blessings resulting from the Constitution and laws of the United States, were daily appreciated and quietly enjoyed.

The following hit at nullification, is from a late speech of Mr. Clark in the Pennsylvania Legislature: There was, he said, a trait of human nature as conspicuous in the national as the individual character.—It was, the proneness of man to exact from those who were always willing to submit rather than contend. We saw it in the cradle. A child in the arms would cry for one toy, and if he got it, he would cry for every thing he saw; he would cry for the moon and beat his nurse, because she couldn't give it to him.

At Lucky-hit farm, Frederick County (Va.) on Tuesday the 26th ult. Richard Kidder Meade, in the 50th year of his age. On the morning of the 26th our friend was in the enjoyment of his usual health. At 12 o'clock he repaired to the meeting-house, at the White Post, and with a fervor of zeal peculiar to himself, was prepared to take an active part in the proceedings of a temperance society, which he himself had been greatly instrumental in forming a few months previous, and to the success of which he seemed determined to devote the energies of his mind and body.

At Bertrand Jr. and succeeded in passing him after an animated contest. It was now supposed that victory would perch upon the banner of Godolphin—Bertrand Jr. still hung upon the haunches of Godolphin, and on the third round, made a demonstration upon his antagonist, but still remained second in the heat.

The friends of Bertrand Jr. were now confident of success. Many supposed that Rattle-snake was a dangerous rival to Bertrand but none supposed that Godolphin could take a position in the next heat.

After the usual time of rubbing had taken place, all were again brought to the starting post and went off at the tap of the drum. Bertrand Jr. taking the lead, Rattle-snake next, and Godolphin considerably in the rear.

There was no doubt as to the result of the race; although Bertrand was under the strongest pull, his competitors were falling far behind, and the heat and race was won with ease by Bertrand, Jr. The time was:—

First heat, : : : : : 7m. 50s
Second, : : : : : 8m. 00
Third, : : : : : 8m. 10s.

Thus terminated one of the best contested races that ever ran over the Washington Course. Bertrand Junr's reputation is now placed beyond the reach of contingency.

Among the queer things of this queer world (says the New York American) the occasional epistolary intercourse of the editor of a newspaper, with his subscribers, holds a very conspicuous place.
