DEATH OF THE RED BIRD.

By a Lady of the Green Mountains.

O! where is the mighty one—say, where is he?
The chief of the fearless, the Chief of the free,
The pride of the chosen and boast of the strong,
The grace of the banquet, the dance and the song;
The war cry has sounded, he heeds not the strain;
The bravest are armed, but he's not in the train;
So fierce in the battle so fleet in the chase,
O! where does he sleep in his dark resting place?
The red deer are bounding thro' green wood and glade,
But he comes not with spoils from the deep forest shade,
His bow lies unstrung and his saddle unprest,
His light bark is moor'd and the oar is at rest:
His lodge is no more—'round the place where it stood.
The white man is ranging the paths that he trod;
The foe and the faithless his footsteps may trace,
But he'll come not again from his dark resting place,
O! sleep on thou fallen one—proud is the tread
Of the haughty usurper above thy low bed—
But thy war shout is silent, thy death song is o'er,
And the wrongs of thy nation shall rouse thee no more,
Sleep on noble warrior—deep, deep be thy rest
No dreams of fell vengeance shall harrow thy breast,
For the last of thy kindred; the last of thy race
Shall soon find a home in thy dark dwelling place.

The Galaxy of Comicalities,

OR SHORT STORIES WELL TOLD.

To be embellished during the Year with One Hundred and Fifty Comic and Humerous Cuts.

IT is proposed to publish on the first Saturday in October 1833, the first number of an entirely new, amusing and highly interesting work, to be entitled the GALAXY OF COMICALITIES, OR SHORT STORIES WELL TOLD. In offering to the public a new paper, when there are so many at present extant, it becomes us to say a word or two relative to the peculiar qualities it will possess.

In the first place; we intend to strike out an entire new and original course. We will not follow the stale path of any cotemporary Journal, but depending on our own resources, and the favors of a number of valued correspondents, propuce at once something worthy of patronage and the smiles of the public. As our title indicates, The Galaxy is intended as a source of pure and cheering amusement—to drive a wrinkle from the brow of care—to ease the woe-begone heart of a portion of its wretchedness—to light the fair face of beauty with an additional smile—to make youth laugh and age forego a frown, will be our chief endeavour, and in short

With mirth and humour drive dull care away,
And make this life an ever smiling day.

The contents of the Galaxy, will consist of short humorous stories, anecdotes, conundrums, comic songs, poetry, &c. and will afford to the reader a rich fund of original reading, calculated to raise a laugh, and yield the most innocent delight.

It will be published every Saturday, on a respectable sized sheet at the exceedingly low price of One Dollar and twenty five cents per annum; or five copies for Five Dollars, payable in all cases in advance. Postmasters are requested to act as agents for the above work.

All letters and orders post paid, must be addressed to

PROPOSALS

For Publishing in Lincolnton, North-Carolina, a Weekly Newspaper, to be called the

Lincoln Herald

THE undersigned being ardently solicited by many of his friends, to undertake the publication of a newspaper in this village, has been induced to offer these proposals, relying on public patronage, for that support necessary to justify him in the prosecution of the same.

His main object will be to instruct, to please, to excite to usefulness, to add to social enjoyment, and to expose whatever has an evil tendency on goood morals.

It will be his purpose to give all the important news, both foreign and domestic, to insert agricultural essays, and to diffuse information on all subjects that have a tendency to improve society in its various relations.

He will intersperse literary information, as well as scientific instruction, mingling at the same time, a flavour of poetry, humor and anecdote, in order to present a variety, so that each individual may find something to gratify his particular taste.

He professes to be a republican, both in principle and feeling: his political course, therefore, will be to pursue, (according to his judgment) the traces marked out by the Old Jeffersonian School—avoiding on the one hand, that expansion of the Constitution, which tends to consolidation, and shunning on the other, the equally dangerous doctrine of nullification.

He has, as heretofore, the highest regard for the character of Andrew Jackson, and the most confidence in his administration. He holds himself entirely uncommitted as regards his successor—free to support, whenever the exigency arrives whatever individual in his opinion has his character, talents, and sound principles entitled to occupy that elevated station.

All personal controversy will be strictly prohibited, and every exertion will be made to present such a paper as will be acceptable, to the publick.

The HERALD will be published once a week on an imperial sheet, at three dollars per annum. The first No. will be issued on the first of January 1834, or as soon thereafter as practicable, provided a sufficient number of subscribers are obtained to authorize the commencement.

Peregrine Roberts.

The Spy

And Spirit of the Age.

THE unprecedented success of the SPY, there having been nearly seventeen hundred subscribers received since the commencement of July last—is the best evidence of the estimation it has secured in the public mind. While the present proprietors will pursue the course which has conferred such eminent popularity on their predecessors, they will also use every exertion to give the SPY, if possible, a spirit of greater vigour, variety, and originality, than has heretofore achieved. This publication is designed as a satirical observer and corrector of the morals and manners of the day. Satire is a most effective and powerful weapon in the hands of a judicious tactician, and may be used on any occasion with advantage, but particularly when the vices or follies of the community. The responsible responsibility assumed, is a sufficient guarantee for its utility and excellence; and for the total expulsion from its columns of that licentiousness which blunts the edge of satire, and degrades it to scurrility. Literature and the Drama will be sharers of its columns, and all that is serviceable to the progress of useful information and moral improvement will receive its warm advocacy.

☞ The terms are $2 per annum, payable in advance, or $2 50, if not paid before the expiration of six months.

Agents will be allowed a discount of 10 per cent. on all subscribers they obtain, by becoming responsible for the same. They will be also entitled to a copy of the paper gratuitously.

All orders must be addressed (post paid) to
