

POETRY.

THE INCARCERATED DEBTOR.

Within the bars the debtor stood,
Put in a solitary cell,
Gazing upon a living frowd,
That round his prison rose and fell;

While he with adverse fate contends,
Abandoned in this trying time,
By those he oft had called his friends,
Yet unaccused of fraud or crime;

Oh! why for some unworthy debt,
Some trifling, rob him of his pride,
His feelings and his friends to lose,
And e'en those honest feelings chide?

Then men should estimate the will
Of him whose fate has rendered poor;
In wretchedness he's honest still,
His heart as warm, his soul as pure;

When men should estimate the will
Of him whose fate has rendered poor;
In wretchedness he's honest still,
His heart as warm, his soul as pure;

The Galaxy of Comicallies, OR SHORT STORIES WELL TOLD.
To be embellished during the Year with One Hundred and Fifty Comic and Humorous Cuts.

It is proposed to publish on the first Saturday in October 1833, the first number of an entirely new, amusing and highly interesting work, to be entitled the GALAXY OF COMICALITIES, OR SHORT STORIES WELL TOLD. In offering to the public a new paper, when there are so many at present extant, it becomes us to say a word or two relative to the peculiar qualities it will possess.
In the first place; we intend to strike out an entire new and original course. We will not follow the stale path of any contemporary Journal, but depending on our own resources, and the favors of a number of valued correspondents, propose at once something worthy of patronage and the smiles of the public. As our title indicates, The Galaxy is intended as a source of pure and cheering amusement—to drive a wrinkle from the brow of care—to ease the woe-begone heart of a portion of its wretchedness—to light the fair face of beauty with an additional smile—to make youth laugh and age forego a frown, will be our chief endeavour, and in short
With mirth and humor drive dull care away, And make this life an ever smiling day.
The contents of the Galaxy, will consist of short humorous stories, anecdotes, conundrums, comic songs, poetry, &c. and will afford to the reader a rich fund of original reading, calculated to raise a laugh, and yield the most innocent delight.
It will be published every Saturday, on a respectable sized sheet at the exceedingly low price of One Dollar and twenty five cents per annum; or five copies for Five Dollars, payable in all cases in advance. Postmasters are requested to act as agents for the above work.
All letters and orders post paid, must be addressed to

PROPOSALS

For Publishing in Lincoln, North-Carolina a Weekly Newspaper, to be called the Lincoln Herald.
THE undersigned being ardently desirous by many of his friends, to undertake publication of a newspaper in this part of the State, on public patronage, for that support necessary to justify him in the prosecution of his plan.
His main object will be to instruct, to excite to usefulness, to add to national sentiment, and to expose whatever has an tendency on good morals.
It will be his purpose to give all the news, both foreign and domestic, to issue cultural essays, and to diffuse information on subjects that have a tendency to improve in its various relations.
He will intersperse literary information, well as scientific instruction, mingling at the same time, a flavour of poetry, humor and anecdote, in order to present a variety, so that individual may find something to gratify particular taste.
He professes to be a republican, both in principle and feeling; his political course, therefore will be to pursue, (according to his judgment) traces marked out by the Old Jefferson School—a voiding on the one hand, (that exposure) the Constitution, which leads to consolidation and shunning on the other, the equally deep and dangerous doctrine of nullification.
He has, as heretofore, the highest regard for the character of Andrew Jackson, and the most confidence in his administration. He will himself freely uncommitted as regards his successor—free to support, whenever the right arrives whatever individual may be elected; his character, talents, and sound practical judgment, entitled to occupy that elevated station.
All personal controversy will be strictly inhibited, and every exertion will be made to send such a paper as will be acceptable to the public.
The Herald will be published once on an imperial sheet, at three dollars per copy. The first No. will be issued on the first of Oct. 1834, or as soon thereafter as practicable, and a sufficient number of subscribers are desired to authorize the commencement.
