

that place. She readily... ed there two years, giving entire satisfaction to her numerous patrons. When she signified her intention to leave them, they manifested deep regret at parting from her, and solicited her stay with tears of grief. The next year she labored in Rutherfordton, where she gave all the satisfaction that could be expected, having under her immediate care and inspection in the course of the year about 90 females. This proved too great a task for one in such a feeble state of health, and she was persuaded by her friends to give up teaching for a while, at least until her health became restored. She yielded with reluctance, and remained for a short time in this state of relaxation, when she became more anxious to engage in the occupation for which nature seemed to have formed her taste.

By invitation she consented to take charge of Wilkesborough Academy, not so much to become an Instructor in the Academy, but to give her constant influence in behalf of female education. She hoped also in this elevated climate to have enjoyed a better state of health than had been her lot for several years past.

An extract from a letter addressed to her pupils in Rutherfordton, after she came to Wilkesborough, will show that she was actuated by the purest motives in coming to this place. "I consider it a positive duty to do what I can, where so much is necessary to be done. And it is my sincere belief that I can do more here (with the blessing of heaven) in advancing the interests of education and of God; than in any village I have been in the State." None can doubt but that she discharged her duty to her pupils with the greatest fidelity. They in their turn cherish her in their remembrance with much affection. May they never forget the pious instructions she has given them from time to time.—This closes the public labors of Mrs. Hall.

For the gratification of her distant friends, we will subjoin a few remarks in regard to the state of her mind. She always entertained humiliating views of her spiritual attainments; and was ever ready to confess her faults, her short comings, and her unworthiness to be called a child of God. In the commencement of her sickness her spirits were unusually depressed, and she observed that darkness had come over her mind. This she attributed to her unfaithfulness in the performance of her secret devotions. She desired her friends to pray, that she might be resigned to the will of God in all things—and that her afflictions might be sanctified. She observed that she was not afraid to die, but at that time (on account of her little son) she would rather live. As her sufferings increased (which were very great) her thoughts were exercised upon death, and in contemplating that rest that remains for the people of God. After testifying of the goodness and mercy of God through Christ, she expressed herself willing and anxious to die: Being asked frequently by her friends if she could give up her husband and child, she said "Oh, yes! they are in the hands of the Lord." Whilst conversing with her one evening she seemed somewhat impatient to be gone, and said it would be better for her as well as her friends who must have become weary of attending upon her. I told her the Lord knew best—Yes, she says, he does, I wish he would teach me what I want, and how to pray aright. I asked her if it was the will of the Lord to raise her up to future usefulness would she be willing to live—she hesitated as if the prospect of death was more inviting than that of life—she then exclaimed "Oh! you do not know how little I think of this poor paltry world." She was perfectly conscious of her situation until the last, and always expressed a peaceful resignation to the divine will. She spoke frequently and affectionately of her spiritual guides, Dr and Mrs. Brown. Being asked where the latter was, she said "in heaven, and I shall soon be with her." It would be unnecessary in a communication of this kind, to enumerate all that was said by our departed friend. Suffice it to say, that at 2 o'clock on Thursday morning the 23d of August, she died in great peace, leaving many relatives and friends to mourn over their irreparable loss. But we entertain the strongest hope of greeting our happy sister "where sickness and sorrow, pain and death, are felt and feared no more."

"And now far off beyond our walks, Beneath a grassy mound by strangers trod, That form is cold—The hand & heaving breast Are still. Paleness has settled on her cheeks. Those lips of rosy tinge are mute, And quenched is all the beaming sweetness of her eyes. Yet unextinguished still a spark remains—
