From the Boston Mail THE SWORD OF WASHINGTON. BY AUGUSTINE DUGANNE. Not as a battle gift We grasp our chieftain's sword-Not in the combat to uplift, To light the hattle's stormy rift, Where Freedom's blood is poured ; We hail thee, O thou warrior blade Of brighter days the sign : Like that which arm'd the Gallic maid Whose hand the rushing foeman stayed With courage all divine.

Sword of the mighty dead, Thy light shall guard our land ; And, even as the meteor dread Which flames around the Archangel's head, Shall blast each foeman's hand. Sword! thou art Freedom's chosen guest, In her own festal hall ; At her right hand in triumph rest, Thy point at each dark traitor's breast, Who would out land enthrall.

Gaze from thy home on high, O, thou immortal one. And hear each blast that rushes by, Each brooklet's voice, each forest's sigh, Bless thee, great WASHINGTON ! Star of the patriot's trusting soul, When thought shall soil thy fame, May blighting tempests o'er us roll,

From the New Bedford Bullelin. DORR'S SPEECH IN BOSTON.

The Great Democratic Pow-wow in 'Ol Funnel' came off last evening, to the excrutiating delight of the country members of he Lee s'ature, who board nowhere st six pence's week, payable when the landlady can get it without interest. The gentleman from Sekonk, who did not want his place of residence put in the Sergeant-st Arm's Directory, eat so largely that he could not make a speech when his turn came, from which it will be readily inferred that be must have esten a great deal

Our exclusive Reporter was in the Hall and took copious notes of the whole affair, which be deposited in his pocket-book We regret, however, to say, that this was stolen from him, with "a sum of money," while he was leaving the Hall. Nothing escaped except a report of Mr. Dorr's speech, which will be found below.

In justice to our reporter we would observe that no person connected with the Boston Post is supposed to have had any hand in the 'abstraction." This will be the more readily believed since the most imprinative mind cannot discover the slight-you may regard it, but it strikes me that here was a blow to be simed at the very bowels of the people. I saw that no time was to be lost, if we would preserve our existence. I saw that some decisive measure was nocessary; Chepachet called to me; Woonsocket called to me, and so various other well known and celebrated parts of the State. Generations yet unborn, with piteous secents, out of the future, bawled out to me, "Get up a Constitution." and, gentlemen, got up one, and that Constitution, which would have secured not only oysters-not only clams-but even the right of taking chickens (delicions edible !) from every hen roust-that Constitution, the glory of the age, to which Marcus Morton owes his election. was legally adopted by David Parmenmaking Spoons, &c., and repairing Silver ter, Dutee J. refused to give up the government to Mr. Parmenter and myself. I went to Washing. ton to obtain the assistance of the General Government in asserting my right, but singular to relate, the President did not invite me to the White House to dinner. Burn-

I summoned the people, to the Chest, &c. number of one hundred around me, at the domicil of Burrington Anthony; we mustered our forces ; we swore we would take the Arsenal (at least I did); we marched against it ; with a cannon ; I touched off the cannon myself, but, gentlemen, the people had plugged the cannin and the cannon would not go off, but the people did, so that in the moraing, nobody was left by me except such as were not able to go, for various reasons, and I, feeling like one, who treads alone, some banquet hall deserted, saw that I should be taken off to State Prison if I did not take myself off, and so I left the State with feelings more easy to imagine than fail. describe. To this hour I have never been able to understand why the people spiked that cannon-it is to me inscrutable. Once more I made at Chepachet an effort to sustain my Constitution, and once more I failed. Ah ! gentlemen, at the hour of trial, when provisions became scarce, the people left me .- What does this prove, gentlemen, but that it is necessarylif you would have the people true to the great principles ant gripings, faintness, depression, &c. of government, you must give them enough to eat ! The people are the source of all power ; in them resides the sovreignty : if it does not, where does it reside ? The will of the people is supreme, and they have the sole right to establish government, and overthrow it tioned here. I find no fault with Gov. THE FINE .- Senator Dayton expressed 'our sentiments' in relation to refunding Gen. Jackson's fine, in his remarks immediately preceding he passage of the bill through the Senate. In allusion to a late publication of the 'old hero, where he undertakes to dictate the shape of the proposed refunding law, Mr. Dayton says :

"Sir, the exacting spirit of General Jackson, which rejects all common forms of law, can never be gratified by me. I mean no disrespect to those who view this thing in another light; but I, for one cannot erawl with my offering, like a grovelling Hindoo, to the foot of the idul. He has taken his stand. He has denounced the Judge, in a recent letter, in language the most opprobious He will accent of nothing short of complete exculpation. From this he will not re ede. His character is compressed in a sentence, "nulla vestigia retrorsum." But will the Congress of the United States-will the Whig parv even, seem to truckle! For one, having fac ed the substance, I shall not scare at the shadow. Were this a claim of some friendless, powerless one, I could more feadily yield. The precedent would be less dangerous. But, to Gen Jackson, who comes in the strength of a great name and party, with his iron heel upon the Judge and the Constitution, dictating the terms upon which he law must be passed, if at all-to him I will try to be just, but my justice must be measured by square and compass."

MR. CLAY.

HONORABLE T. F. MARSHALL,

The following beautiful extract is from an article written for the Observer and Reporter, in 1839, by the distinguished Representative from this District, over the signature of "A Chilzen of Woodford." the authorship of which. was afterwards avowed by Mr. Marshall. It waextracted and extensively published at the time as containing one of the most just and heautiful ributes that had ever been paid to Mr. Clay It is, we perceive, again going the rounds of the

"Who does not know him upon whom the hopes of Whig America are fastened, and to whom the eyes of Christendom are directed Who does not know the most remarkable man of the age ; the man whose youth was without est resemblance between a 'Bill of Fare' and a pocket-book ; and should any report of the Festival appear in the Post, the pubhe may rest assured that it is not written out from our notes.

We hasten to lay before our readers an abstract of the Speech of the Hero of Chepachet. We were pained to see the gallent, and honorable gentleman in rather a thin condition. Indeed it will be seen that he made an allusion to this fact in the course of his remarks.

Col. Greene offered the following toast, which was received with immense cheer-100 :---

Dorr and Chepachet-Inseparable names like Wellington and Waterloo-they wil always inflame the bosoms of us military with red hot ferocity against the enemies of Universal Suffrage and the free and enlight enened States of North America.

When this was offered Governor Dorr was deep in the discussion of a clam-pie and a glass of hot whiskey punch, and would have failed to make the proper response, had not the honorable P. W. Leland removed these delicious visnds from under his nose, with great dexterity, which gave occasion to many to remark, that, with proper education, there was not much doubt but that the member from Bristo! would have made an excellent watter. Dorr having been 'stirred up,' and told that his time had come, srose and said :

Mr. President-The magnificent spread before me excites abdominal feelings within me, only to be imagined by those who have partaken of the sp called hospitality of Ilenry Hobbard. There is, sir, a touching old ballad to the effect that,

> Old mother Hubbard She went to the cupboard To get he poor dog a bone : When she got there The cupboard was bare. So the poor dog had none.

I am convinced, sir, that the Hubbard at present presiding over the State of New Hampshire, is no other than a legitimate descendent of the old dog loving lady menas a man-my heart beats with the rapidest kind of grateful pulsations when I think of his refusal to give me up to Sam King, the Gov. MORTON wretched Algerine - (applause,) but gazing upon these viands, and remembering his house-keeping, my stomach, in its primary to fall upon the almonds and apples with capacity (great applause) revolts (cheers) at the recollection.
