IMPORTANT SPEECH IN PARLIAMENT—LORD PALMERSTON ON REPUDIATION. On the 6th ultimo, an important speech was made by Viscount Palmerston in the House of Commons, in reply to a proposition of Lord George Bentinck, to enforce from Spain the payment of forty-six millions sterling due to the subjects of England, on which she had only paid a part of the interest during the last seven years. Lord George argued at length that it was the duty of the British government to compel Spain to make provision for her debt, or the debt of her subjects, due to Englishmen. In this Lord Palmerston agreed with him, but thought the enforcement of the law a question of time and expediency. We make the following significant extract:— Although I entreat the House, upon grounds of public policy, not to impose at present upon Her Majesty's Government the obligations which the proposed address would throw upon them, yet I would take this opportunity of warning foreign governments who are debtors to British subjects, that the time may come when this House will no longer sit patient [hear, hear], under the wrongs and wrongs inflicted upon the subjects of this country [cheers from all sides]. I would warn them that the time may come, when the British nation will not see with tranquility the sum of 150 millions due to British subjects and the interest not paid. [loud cheers.] And I would warn them that if they do not make proper efforts adequately to fulfil their engagement, the government of this country, whatever men may be in office, may be compelled by the force of public opinion, and by the votes of Parliament [hear] to depart from that which hitherto has been the established practice of England, and to insist upon the payment of debts due to British subjects, [loud cheers.] That we have the means of enforcing the rights of British subjects I am not prepared to dispute [hear, hear]. It is a perfect right to claim the protection of the British Government. He trusted the terms used by the noble Viscount would have their proper effect on some of the States of the North American Union who are indebted to this country. He had always taken deep interest to the United States of America. He thought he perceived in them a rising prosperity from the policy of a wise and honest Government, but he was sorry to observe in later years that, notwithstanding all the means which they had to sell all their productions, they had allowed their claims to fall into arrear. The United States had thus lost the high character which they had once held; but he trusted the sentiments of the noble lord would reach them, and that ere long their credit would be redeemed.
