

COURTSHIP AFTER MARRIAGE.
From Lane's Memoirs.
One evening, in a gay party at Herr Kretschmer's, the subject turned upon female beauty, and a gentleman of the company asserted that the youngest daughter of the Kammerath Ammon, (a blonde born in April, 1776.) was the most beautiful girl in the city. I instantly resolved to try myself upon that subject, without loss of time, and slipping out of the room I went straight to the Kammerath's house and rang the bell.
The door was opened by the youngest daughter herself, who explained the unusual circumstance by saying it happened that no one was in the house excepting her parents and herself.
I looked earnestly at the maiden and found her beautiful and graceful beyond all description; so, without hesitation, I asked her, there, on the threshold, if she would be my wife.
'Why not?' answered she. 'But come in and speak to my parents.'
We parted late in the evening, with a tender embrace—all was settled between us.

In the village of Truppach, on the 18th of January, 1796 we were married, in a good simple fashion, and late in the evening the bride stepped into my carriage, at her father's door, and went with me to my old house.
I soon found that it is easier for a man to become a bridegroom than a wise husband. We plagued each other constantly in the beginning, out of pure love, till continual vexation and coldness ensued, which we both felt, but could not account for.
Yesterday my little lady would not suffer me to leave her side, and to-day she found it good to visit her brother, ten miles in the country, without bidding me adieu, or naming the time of her return.
Two days after this, hasty messengers came one after another—I must come—I should come—without me she could have no peace.
I went, and the joy of re-union seemed as if it could never end. On the following day I was again a burthen. I left her with a cold paring, and that self same night came the repentance by an extra post—she could not live without me—I must hasten back.
This certainly would not do—in this way all my identity would not be destroyed.

Since the day of my marriage with my beautiful wife, I had been the submissive slave of her will; but now that it was plain that she had no will of her own, I must follow some other plan. I sat down to consider, and, after some reflection, decided what to do.
Since my marriage, my old employment and pursuits have been altogether neglected; but I now resumed them, and as much as possible returned to my bachelor life.
My wife every day sent letters full of tears; but I paid no attention to them outwardly, although they touched my heart sorely. At length I wrote her a long serious letter, in which I said that as we had been married without any previous courtship, it was not strange that, being unacquainted with each other's character, we could not harmonize together, and I proposed that she should remain at her father's house at present, and that, with her permission, I would visit her two or three times a week and spend an evening with her in conversation, until we were acquainted with each other, and, after that, if she would like me well enough, I would take her home to be my wife—but if she found she could not be satisfied with my habits, manners and character, I would leave her under her father's roof and give up all claims upon her.
This plan did not please her much; but she appeared to think it would not be becoming in her to bring up any objection.
Well—to cut a long story short, after a formal courtship of no very great length, I once more took her home and she made me one of the best little wives in the world.—From the German.

A GOOD HUSBAND.
When you see a young man, modest and retiring in his manners, who cares less about his dress than his moral character, depend upon it, ladies, he will make an excellent husband. If you see one that is kind and attentive to his mother, affectionate to sisters, industrious in his habits, and economical in his business, rest assured you have found one of whom you never will be ashamed. The ball room is no place to find a husband; the fashionable assembly is no place—it is in the retirement of home, in the place of business, where you can study the character and the disposition; and where the best outside is not put on for effect and display. Many a young woman sadly misses it, who is carried away by a bright look and splendid dress. The man who makes the most polite bow, and is the most graceful in his manners, is not always the most suitable person for a husband. Look at the heart, study the character and learn the disposition.
We knew a beautiful young lady—beautiful to look upon, we mean—who turned up her pretty nose at a shoemaker, and refused to acknowledge a painter in the streets who married a dashing fop, the son of a wealthy man. Poor girl! A few years misery passed away, and her husband became reduced, and she to maintain him actually took in washing. Many a shoemaker's wife and many a painter's daughter has contributed to her comfort during the last years of her life. Girls, be wise and look at the heart—the character, if you want good husbands.

Duties of the Medical Profession to the Public.

As good citizens, it is the duty of physicians to be ever vigilant for the welfare of the community, and bear their part in sustaining its institutions and burdens; they should also be ever ready to give counsel to the public in relation to matters especially appertaining to their profession, as on subjects of medical police, public hygiene, and legal medicine. It is their province to enlighten the public in regard to quarantine regulations,—the location, arrangement, and dietaries of hospitals, asylums, schools, prisons, and similar institutions,—in relation to the medical police of towns, as drainage, ventilation, &c.,—and in regard to measures for the prevention of epidemic and contagious diseases; and when pestilence prevails, it is their duty to face the danger, and to continue their labours for the alleviation of the suffering, even at the jeopardy of their own lives.

2. Medical men should also be always ready, when called on by the legally constituted authorities, to enlighten coroners' inquests and courts of justice, on subjects strictly medical,—such as involve questions relating to sanity, legitimacy, murder by poisons or other violent means, and in regard to the various other subjects embraced in the science of Medical Jurisprudence. But in these cases, and especially where they are required to make a post-mortem examination, it is just, in consequence of the time, labour and skill required, and the responsibility and risk they incur, that the public should award them a proper honorarium.

3. There is no profession, by the members of which, eleemosynary services are more liberally dispensed, than the medical, but justice requires that some limits should be placed to the performance of such good offices. Poverty, professional brotherhood, and certain public duties referred to in section 1 of this chapter, should always be recognized as presenting valid claims for gratuitous services; but neither institutions endowed by the public or by rich individuals, societies for mutual benefit, for the insurance of lives or for analogous purposes, nor any profession or occupation, can be admitted to possess such privilege. Nor can it be justly expected of physicians to furnish certificates of inability to serve on juries, to perform militia duty, or to testify to the state of health of persons wishing to insure their lives, obtain pensions, or the like, without a pecuniary acknowledgment. But to individuals in indigent circumstances, such professional services should always be cheerfully and freely accorded.

4. It is the duty of physicians, who are frequent witnesses of the enormities committed by quackery, and the injury to health and even destruction of life caused by the use of quack medicines, to enlighten the public on these subjects, to expose the injuries sustained by the unwary from the devices and pretensions of artful empirics and impostors. Physicians ought to use all the influence which they may possess, as professors in Colleges of Pharmacy, and by exercising their option in regard to the shops to which their prescriptions shall be sent, to discourage druggists and apothecaries from vending quack or secret medicines, or from being in any way engaged in their manufacture and sale.

Obligations of the public to Physicians.
1. The benefits accruing to the public directly or indirectly from the active and unwearied beneficence of the profession, are so numerous and important, that physicians are justly entitled to the utmost consideration and respect from the community. The public ought likewise to entertain a just appreciation of medical qualifications;—to make a proper discrimination between true science and the assumptions of ignorance and empiricism,—to afford every encouragement and facility for the acquisition of medical education,—and no longer allow the statute books to exhibit the anomaly of exacting knowledge from physicians, under liability to heavy penalties, and of making them obnoxious to punishment for resorting to the only means of obtaining it.

The Springfield Republican says we have received the statistics of the various branches of industry in Massachusetts, for 1845, taken with the state census that year. To show our young ladies that it is no disgrace to work in the Pilgrim land, we give them the particulars of the straw bonnets and hats, and straw braids and palm leaf hats, made there in one year:

Number.	Value.
Straw Bonnets & Hats, 1,046,954	$1,057,892
Value of Straw Braid, 102,367	102,367
Palm Leaf Hats, 496,337	496,337
	$1,640,596

All this by females, mostly farmers' daughters. Worcester, Hampshire and Franklin counties do the most. Are not such industrious girls worth going after? Instead of street yarns, they are for the dollars and cents. They don't constantly bother their parents and husbands with teasing for a new silk dress, or $40 shawl. They have the money in their purse, from their own industry. There are lots of rosy cheeks who have their hundreds deposited in banks, from the straw braid employment. We once knew two sisters who bought a farm for $4,000 for their parents, from the savings of braid.

Gen. Taylor has been compelled, by the nature of his private engagements, to decline an invitation given him by the citizens of Vicksburg to visit that town.
