THE CROWDED STREET.

BY WM. CULLEN BRYANT. Let me move slowly through the street, Filled with an ever-shifting train, Amid the sound of steps that beat The muringring walks like autumn rain.

How fast the flitting figures come-The mild the fierce, the stony face-Some bright with thoughtless smiles, and some Where secret tears have left their trace.

They pass-to toil, to strive, to rest; To halls in which the feast is spread : To chambers where the funeral guest In silence sits beside the dead.

And some to happy homes repair, Where children, pressing cheek to cheek, With mute caresses shall declare The tenderness they cannot speak.

And some, who walk in calmness here, Shall shudder as they reach the door-Where one who made their dwelling dear, Its flower, its light, is seen no more.

Youth, with pale cheeks and slender frame, And dreams of greatness in thine eye! Goest thou to build an early name, Or early in the task to die? Keen sons of trade, with anxious brow !

Who is now fluttering in thy snare ? Thy golden fortunes, tower they now ! Or melt the glittering spires in air ? Who of this crowd, to-night, shall tread The dance till daylight gleams again ?

Who sorrow o'er the untimely dead ! Who writhe in throes of mortal pain? Some, famine struck, shall think how long The cold, dark hours, how slow the light! And some, who flaunt among the throng, Shall hide in dens of shame to-night. Each where his task or pleasures call, They pass, and heed each other not ; There is, who heeds, who holds them all In His large love and boundless thought.

These struggling tides of life, that seem In wayward, aimless course to tend, Are eddies of the mighty stream That rolls to its appointed end.

OUR LITTLE BOY.

When the evening shadows gather Round about our quiet hearth, Comes our eldest born unto us, Bending humbly to the earth. And with hands enclasped tightly, And with meek eyes raised above, To the source of light and love.

" Bless my parent. O, my Father ! Bless my little sister dear ; While I gently take my slumbers, Be thy gnardian angels near. Should no morning's dawn e'er greet me, Beaming brightly from the skies, Thine the eye of love to meet me In the paths of Paradise."

Now a glad "Good night" he gives us, And he seals it with a kiss; Naught of earthly sorrow grieves us In an hour so full of bliss. Now our arms about him wreathing, One fond kiss before he sleep; Soon we hear his gentle breathing In a slumber calm and deep.

SMALL BEGINNING.

Despise not the day of small things. This sentence contains wisdom and philosophy, as well as scripture. It is very easy and natural to sneer at small beginnings and humble means, but it is not always wise to do so. It is better to commence on an humble scale, and come out in good style at last, than suffer a severe collapse after an extensive and ridiculous flourish. Some men will do better with a capital of sixpense, than they would if half the fortune of Astor had been given them to commence with. We have heard it told of a man worth his millions, that he commenced by selling fruit at a street stall. We have seen boys at school roll by its accumulated matter, it became so bulky, that a dozen could scarcely move it. Sands make the mountains, moments make the year, drops make the ocean; and so, little endeavors, earnestly, unceasingly, and honestly put forth, make the great men in the world's history.

We say then don't despise the day of small things. If you have an undertaking to accomplish, or a good thing to bring about, begin according to your means, and never be discouraged because you cannot make so magnificent a commencement as you could wish. Old King John the Frenchman, five hundred years ago at heart." took it into his head to found a library; and he began with-what do you suppose? "What can affect a cheerful lively girl like ten volumes. But he knew what he was about ; for that library-the Royal Library of Paris-is now the most magnificent public library in the world, and contains 700,000 volumes. A whale one day came frolicking into the harbor of Nantucket, a short time after the first settlement of that island, and as for many hours it continued there, the enterprising inhabitants were induced to contrive and prepare a large barbed iron with a strong cord attached, with which they finally succeeded in securing this aquatic monster. A small matter, truly; but it was the commencement of a business which has added millions to the a husband?" wealth of the people-the incipient introduction to an enterprise which nearly but you will think me bold, and deficient in three quarters of a century ago extorted a noble tribute of admiration from Edmund Burke, on the floor of the British Parliament. The fishermen in Holland once had a dispute in a tayern, on the question whether the fish takes the book, or the book, takes the fish. From the trivial circumstance arose two opposing parties the "Hooks" and the "Cobble Joinst," who for two centuries divided the nation, and maintained a contest not unlike that between the red and white roses in England. There is traditionary counterpart to this in our own history. We'allude to the stoincredible about it, however, and, as most of our readers are too young to recollect the anecdote we will venture to repeat it. "Two neighbors, both of the old Federal school of politics, who had lived in the city of Providence, chanced to quarrel. And so it happened, one was the owner of a pig, who had an irresistible inclination to perambulate in the garden of the next neighbor. The owner of the garden comit was all because he kept his fences in such an ill repair. The pig was taking his morning walk when he was surprised in the act of rooting up some very valuable bulbous roots; this was the last " feather;" the owner of the garden put a pitchfork into his tender sides, and killed him outright. At the coming election, the owner of the garden was a candidate for a vote, the vote of his incensed neighbor. who voted against him. At the election of a Senator, the Democratic candidate was elected by one vote - and when the question of war with England was before the Senate, it was declared by the majority of one vote-so that but for this pig we should have been probably saved from this war." ted sculptor, that when a boy, he was one day observed by a gentleman in the neighborhood of Sheffield, very earnestly engaged in cutting a stick with a penknife. He asked the lad what he was doing; and with great simplicity the boy replied, "I am cutting old Fox's head." Fox was ed." the school-master of the village. On this the gentleman asking to see what he had lent likeness, presented the youth with a sixpence. This may be reckoned as the first money Chantrey ever received for the production of his art; and from such a beginning it was that arose this greatest of modern artist.

Again we say, despise not small beginnings, nor look with supercilious contempt upon everything which appears insignifi- of business, and have the sole control; there cant and trifling. Trifles are not so plen- will be no difficulty-I am confident of the rety in this world as many of us imagine. sult." A philosopher has observed that wars, involving mischief to great nations, have arisen from a ministerial despatch? being written in a fit of indigestion!-When Alexander Pope received his present of Turkey figs, he little thought that a twig from the basket was to be the means of up of and governed by trifles, at first too small to attract notice; and the wise man will not only cultivate sharp eyes, but attentive habits, making the most and the best of everything small, but small sours. National Library.

The Girl who would be Married.

Mr. W- had by industry and economy accumulated a large property. He was a man of rather superior mind and acquirements, but unfortunately became addicted to habits of intemperance. Naturally fond of company, possessing superior conversational powers, his sociefy was much sought, and he eventually became a sot. His wife was a feeble woman, without much decision of character; but an only child, a daughter, was the reverse, illustrating one of those singular laws of nature, that the females oftenest take after the father in character and personal personalities, and the males after the mother.

Mary was well aware of the consequences that would inevitably follow her father's course, and had used every exertion of reason and persuasion in her power, to induce him to alter his habits, but without avail; his resolutions and promises could not withstand temptation and he pursued his downward course, till the poor girl a handful of snow upon the ground, till, despaired of reform, and grievously realized what the end must result in.

John D- was a young man from the East, possessed of a good education, as all our New England boys are, and the most indomitable industry and perseverance, and was working on the farm of a neighbor by the month.

Mary, on going on some errand to the next house, met him on the road, with the usual salutation-" Good morning, Mr. D-"

"Good morning, Miss W---. How's your

"A wife! well, I don't know. Do you want

"Indeed I do, the worst way. I don't know that maidenly modesty which becomes a young woman; but if you knew my situation, and the fflaictions under which I suffer I think it would be some excuse for my course."

" Have you thought of all the consequences ?" said John. "My situation-I am poor-you are rich-I am a stranger, and-"

"Indeed I have, till I am almost crazy. Let me explain-you and every one else know the unfortunate situation of my poor father. His habits are fixed beyond amendment, and his property is wasting like dew before the sun .-A set of harpies are drinking his very heart's ry of the pig, whose stupid obstinacy, we blood, and ruin and misery staring us in the

"And yet, my dear young lady, what can you know of me, to warrant you in taking such an important step?" " It is enough for me that I am satisfied with your character and habits-your person and plained of the pig-sty being insufficient to manners. I am a woman and have eyes. I don't want to enter our seat in the Legislature, and failed by one house of distress again until I have one on whom I can rely, to control and direct the affairs of my disconsolate home, and to support me in my determination to TURN OVER A NEW LEAF in our domestic affairs."

"But not in this old hat, and in my shirtsleeves, Mary !"

"Yes-and I in my old sun-bonnet and dirty apron. If you are content, let it be done at It is related of Chantrey, the celebra- once. I hope you will not think I am so hard pushed as that comes to; but I want a master. I am willing to be mistress, but to be master is more than I am equal to. " Now, John, if that is sincere, this is the happiest moment of my life, and I trust our union will be long and happy. I am the only one my poor father will hear to; but alas, his resolutions are like ropes of sand. I can manage him on all other subjects; you must take charge

They were married and a more happy match there was never consummated. Everything prospered; houses and barns were repaired, fences and gates were regulated, and the extensive fields smiled and flourished like an Eden. The unfortunate father in a few years sunk inintroducing the weeping willow into Eng- to a drunkard's grave. Mary and John raised land and America. So is this world made a large family, and they still live respected and wealthy-all from an energetic girl's resolution, forethought and courage.

> MEXICAN ART .- There are many interesting specimens of Mexican art and taste now exhibited on St. Charles St., opposite the theatre. The saddle of Santa Anna, captured at Puebla which cost originally $5000, is a gorgeous and magnificent piece of art, and displays in strong light the great skill and taste of the Mexican mechanics. It would be in vain to attempt a description of it, so rich, various and beautiful are its texture and ornaments. It glitters with precious stones, and is heavy with gold and silver. The pommell is a solid gold eagle's head, and the green velvet of the seat is relieved by the most tasteful and elegant gold and silver embroidery. The stirrups are of solid silver washed with gold. The bridle is of gold cord, and the front piece is of gold, studded with brilliants, and jewels of different lines .-Throughout all the appurtenances prevails the same luxuriance of wealth. This saddle was taken at Puebla when Santa Anna was forced to make a precipitate retreat from that town .-

It was manufactured in that place. Among other interesting curiosities exhibited is the gold cloth dress in which the infant of Gen. Swnta Anna, by his present wife, was christened. This was found in a tortoise-shell box of diminutive dimension and ingeniously interlined with silver and gold. The same box contained a miniature silver trunk, intended no doubt, to amuse the young Santa Anna.

We saw, also, the silver and gold corded tassels of Santa Anna's bed, and many little toys and ornaments which formed a portion of his household goods. There are specimens of carving in virgin silver, of tortoise shell, of glass work, of hair platting all made by the Indians of Mexico, which exhibit no less taste than art. -New Orleans Delta.

Washington Runkles Esq., (says the Baltimore American) Publishes a card in the Westminster Carrolltonian stating ent day, but after mature reflection and close investigation of the principles of the two parties, he has come to the conclusion to support the man that never surrenders, and use all honorable means in his power to elect to the Presidency General Zachary Taylor."

A KEEN RETORT .- A writer in the George. town Baptist Herald says: "A preacher not one hundred miles from this place, while contending, as he thought, for the 'ancient order of things,' ridiculing the doctrine of a call to the ministry, as proof that there is no such call, observed, that he never believed he was called to preach. 'And no person else ever believed it.' said an acquaintance standing by.

A Dutchman once wanted to wed a widow. and his manner of making known his intentions was as follows: " If you is content to get no better for a worse, to be happy for a miserable, and if you smoke and drinks ale, I shall take you for no better and much worse." The lady said, "Yaw!"

VERY POLITE. - The editor of the Arkansas Journal says :- Where our office was two weeks ago, now rons the Mississippi river .are gravely told, involved us in a war with face. We are almost strangers, it is true; we Out of respect to the father of rivers we left.

KEEP IT LSO BEFORE THE PEO. PLE, That Gen.
