BY J. SCILLIVAN. I cannot sleep in feverish pain When delirium racks the brain, And phantoms flit before my view, Which waking fancy never knew. I cannot sleep-to me it seems, Where all the shades from dark to bright Meet, mix, commingle and unite. And blent in chaos seem to show, Confus'd-the colors of the bow, Which make a momentary stay, Like rising mists, then fade away Or like the bright meteors glow, From darkness come to darkness go; And every form by nature wrought, Of which man ever dreamt or thought. Inhabitants of land or sea And myriads form'd by phantassy, Forever changing-ever new, Seem to be passing in review. A moment's pause—a change of scene, I roam 'mid airy woodlands green ; The landscape stretches far away, And soft and bland the zephyrs play, All nature wears the hues of Spring, And birds aloft as sweetly sing, As erst in nature's primal hours,
They sung their notes in Eden's howers.
Wild phrenzy paints her creatures bright;
Angelic forms in robes of light— Sun shine and calm dispel the gloom, And flowers yield a sweet perfume, While tones of music soft and slow, Like dying echo's come and go. Another change-each airy form Of shower, sun shine and of storm ; The avalanche, rain, hail and snow, The turbid waters sluggish flow; The earthquake's shock-tornado's sweep-The lightnings flash -the raging deep, Chaos of elemental strife. That seems with dire destruction rife, All crowd upon my wandering inind, Which not one moment's rest can find Who can sleep in feverish pain, When delirium racks the brain : And phantoms flit before the view, Which waking fancy never knew!

LOSS OF THE STEAMER AMAZON. London papers contain many particulars in relation to the dreadful loss of this ship, and the great number of persons on board her. With the exception of the twenty one persons first reported to have been saved, no intelligence had been received in London of the escape of any others until Thursday the 8th, when the Submarine Telegraph from Paris announced the arrival at Brest on the 5th of a Dutch vessel, bringing in six passengers and nineteen of a crew of the Amagon. This makes the number saved nine passengers and thirty seven of the ship's company. If was hoped that others might yet have been heard of, as there were nine boats one of which was still unaccounted for.

Of the causes which fed to this terrible caras. trophe nothing is jet known with certainty .-The only conjecture that can at present be haz arded is that which connects with the outbreak of the fire the heated state of the bearings. All new ships suffer more or less in the same way until their engines get into working trim, and as will be seen from the subjoined narrative, the Amazon was twice stopped in her course from this very cause. The gale of wind which was blowing, the heavy sea, and the full pressure of steam, all tended to increase the danger likely thus to arise, and the point at which the flames were first seen appears to prove that they originated in the engine room.

The loss of life, the swamping of the boats, and all the other horrors of this afflicting event are very easily accounted for. The position of the fire rendered it impossible to get at the engines in order to stop them. When the ships head was to windward the flames swept the af terdecks, where the passengers chiefly were. Belove wind she was going at a tremenduous speed, and it is marvelous how any of the boats were launched under such circumstances and in such a sea. The following writen state. ment, by Midshipman WILLIAM VINCENT, has

"The Amazon was at noon of the 3d of Jan. in lat. 49 12N. and long. 4 57 W., from which time she steered W. by S. 1 S. till 9 30 P. M. of the same day, when she was stopped to cool the bearings. At 11 20 P. M. she proceeded still steering the same course, steaming about eight and a half knots per hour, wind and sea increasing from the windward. At forty minutes A. M. on the 4th, smoke was observed coming through the hatchway, on the foreside of the foremost funnel. Immediately afterwards the flames burst through. The alarm was immediately given, and the captain and chief officer came on deck. The firehose and buckets of water were brought to play on the fire, but that together with the attempt to stop the engine was ineffectual. The belm was put bare to starboard to put her before the wind, but it was some time before she paid off. The mail boat, when lowered, was immediately swamp ed with about twenty five people in her, all of whom were lost. The pinnace when lowered, sheered across the sea before the people in her could unhook the foretackle. They were there. by the bow. While clearing away the second end immediately fell down, and the people in her, with the exception of two, who hung doub led over the thwarts, were precipitated into the sea and drowned. Sixteen men including two passengers succeeded in clearing away and lowering the life-boat on the starboard side. They used every endeavor to save those in the water, but were swept past so rapidly that their exertions were without avail. At about the same time I. (Mr. Vincent.) with the chief steward. one passenger, and two seamen, got into and ney. lowered the dingy, and were picked up by the life boat about half an hour afterwards, when we immediately took the small boat in tow, and stood down for the ship; but the wind and sea her head to the sea. Whilst lying to a barque passed astern of us, and was accordingly bailed, and did I believe answer, but did nothing of any kind to assist us, but stood down to leeward of the ship, hauled on a wind, and went away .-There was now on our quarter a boat with five men in her, (supposed to be the gig.) but we could not from the severity of the weather render her any assistance. About half an hour afterwards we suddenly lost sight of her. About 4 A. M. it rained heavily, wind shifted to the northward, decreasing sea, confused, but going down : put the boat about, and kept before it. At 5 the magazine exploded, and about half an bour afterwards the funnels went over the side soon after which the ship went down bodily. At noon we were picked up by the Marsden, of London, stood in for the coast of France, and afterwards (wind shifting to the Southward) for Falmouth, and lastly for Plymouth, at which place we arrived on Monday, 11 P. M.

OLD LETTERS .- Who has ever casually opened a box or a budget of old letters, address. ed to one's self, and began to read, without being chained to the spot, perhaps for hours together ? The fascinations of these early loved ones, so near and dear, again surround you, and the realities of the past seem more identified with your existence than those of the present. The counsels and chidings, and the affections and encouragements bestowed from parents and elderly friends, are full of a deep and tender feeling, scarcely realized when the recipient of all. And then the little items of news, and the railery, and the urgent invitation to visit, and sometimes to be present in scenes of interest, remind you of youth, and love, and beauty, which has passed away. Then comes, too, the mention of the death of those whose memory had almost faded from you, one's own charmed cirele being as yet unbroken. Sad disasters come back with appaling distinctness and pestilence rages and spends its force. Mere matters of feeling appeared of deep moment, and you al. most smile at the pertubation of the youthful mind, now that you have seen the end of all .-The then political news, with the marriages of the day, and the ideas of some about the impropriety of these matters, are before you now as matters of history; and you can hardly conjecture how the world would have gone on without these events. The inventions and discoveries just bruited, the books that were new, the first public appearance of the rising scholar, (now a man of science and of letters,) bring back "old times" most vividly. Some whose early efforts and self denial are spoken of with satis. faction, have led since then a bright career of usefulness, while many an honored name, then prominent, has disappeared from the list of the living. The loving and the loved are scattered

A LETTER FROM ANOTHER OF THE CUBAN PRISONERS .- We find in the Mobile Register a letter from CHARLES A. DOWNER, one of the Cuban prisoners sent to Spain, in which he relates some of the particulars of the expedition and of its final result, and concludes his statement as follows:

far and wide, and those who thought existence scarce could be, without frequently seeing each other, have not met for years and years, and strangers have taken their places.

" Again I say thus ended this expedition, and so it ought to have ended. For an expedition raised through deception, where young men of no experience in affairs of this sort are induced through false representations to join in a revolution, God's curse ought to be upon it, and the leader should be made to suffer such torments as none but demons could invent. But no, the most innocent in this case have been made to suffer For Col. Haynes and Captain Kelly, two men who worked harder to get up the expedition than any others, were, by order of the Captain General released at Havana. But God's will be done; if I am doomed to remain a prisoner here, I shall submit and bear my fate like a man. But should it be my luck to return home, I assure you sincerely that this is the last time as well as the first that I will ev. er engage in an undertading of this kind."

bars of iron or pipes with the chisel is a laborious and tardy process. By the following mode the same end is attained more speedily, easily, and neatly: Bring the iron to a white heat, and then, fix it in a vice, apply the common saw, which, without being turned in the edge, or injured in any respect, will divide it as easily as if it were a carrot.

Snow Storm. - The western part of N. York has been visited by a snow storm of unusual severity and duration. At Buffale, last Tuesday evening, it had been snowing for twenty four hours, accompanied by a tremendous gale. The roads were By His Excellency DAVID S. Shocks of earthquake were distinctly felt in New Bedford, (Mass.) and Providence and Warwick, (R. In Warwick much alarm was felt, there being a universal shaking of houses.

Page's Improved Portable Patent Circular Saw Mills.

THE Subscribers beg leave to inform their friends, L customers, and the public generally, that they have greatly enlarged their (acilities for manufacturing their celebrated IMPROVED PORTABLE PATENT CIR-CULAR SAW MILLLS, can fill all orders with promptness, and, therefore solicit a share of public pa.

They manufacture mills of three different sizes. The first class" is so constructed, by the conjunctive action of two circular saws, one from above, and the other from below, as to enable it to cut timber of large dimensions, viz: of 43 inches in diameter. This saw mill with a 12 horse engine and boilers, complete in all its parts, except smoke stack, costs $2,035; with the smoke-stack, the price is $2,105, and can cut from 8,-000 to 10,000 feet of lumber per day, and with plenty of hands to handle, can cut 15,000.

The "second class" Saw mill, adjusted with one saw, with a 12 horse power engine, and boiler, complete in all its parts, except smoke-stack, costs $1,835; with smoke-stack, the price is $1,905. It can cut from 6,000 to 8,000 feet per day.

The "third class" Saw mill adjusted with one saw, with a 10 horse power engine and boiler, complete in all its parts, except smoke-stack, costs $1,820: with smoke stack, $1,480. It can cut from 5,000 to 6,000

All of these mills are calculated for steam or water power, while the last is well adapted to se worked by horse power. They are made of the very best materials, by the most skilful workmen, simple in their principles, of great strength, power, and efficiency, and made with due regard for effective service and durability. They can be removed from one place to another with strong teams are easily managed, and not liable, when properly managed to get out of repair. It is saying less of them than they deserve, to affirm, that they can each with the same power, cut more than double the quantity of lumber than can be cut by an Up and Down, or Gang Saw-cut it with a truthful line evenly and smooth.

Unless otherwise ordered, the subscribers' Saw mills are all adjusted with saws of 48 inches diameter, 12 feet carriage, 24 feet ways. The second class mill can carry with ease any saw up to 60 inches-54 inches they look upon as the most desirable size. The third class mill can carry either a 48, 50 or 52 inchsaw advan-

The cost of one of their" third class" Mills and horse power, all complete, is $540-without the horse power, $350. It can cut with 4 horses, from 1,000 to 1,-500 feet, with 6 horses, from 1,800 to 2,500 feet per Engines and boilers contracted to be built by the subscribers, are so constructed as to burn the slabs,-a great advantage. Where more carriage than 12 feet are ordered. $3 per foot, extra, is charged for each foot over that number. If a larger saw than 48 inches is ordered, the difference is charged extra, -if a less saw is required, the difference in price is deducted. With slight additional expense for fixtures, their Saw mills can be adjusted to make shingles and laths.

The subscribers seize this occasion to say, that no person other than themselves in, or out of North Carolina, has any authority directly, or indirectly, to construct their mills for sale, or use, in said State. They, therefore, caution the public against purchasing any Circular Saw Mill involving the same principle as that of Page's Portable Patent Saw Mill, as, by so doing, they will render themselves liable to be sued for damages, by action of trespass, as well as by injunction .-They deem this caution necessary, as from certain advertisements transmitted to them by one of their agents, it is evident that certain parties are bent upon violating the rights granted to the subscribers by letters patent from the United States Government.

The undersigned have seen, with surprise, the statement made in North Carolina papers, that McKinstry's mills had taken the premium at the Maryland State Fair. So far from such being the fact, they unhesitatingly affirm, that that gentleman NEVER exhibited a saw mill at the Fair of the Maryland State Agricultural So-A HINT TO BLACKSMITHS .- The cutting of ciety in his life; and they have too good an opinion of truth, to believe that the statement in question was made either with his consent or knowledge. Persons disposed to purchase are referred to the subscribers' Agent, JOHN M. ROSE, Esq., Fayetteville North Carolina. For terms, &c. applications by letter to the subscribers' post-pain, will be promptly attended to, as well as for pamphlets containing every possible kind of information relative to their mills, as well as various other machines made by them. In the latter cases a post-office stamp should be enclosed as the law of Congress requires pre-payment on all pamphlets.
