Her voice that sings in every breeze; And on her cheeks the blushes glow Like roses on the trees.

She faintly smiles, O then we feel! Sublunar joys and griefs to die ; And Love's right visions soon reveal,

A fancie lightning in her eye.

A NEW RELIGIOUS SECT OF POLYG-AMISTS.

We had some startling accounts of the progress of polygamy among the Motmons of Utah, but their practices seem to be propriety itself, compared to those which prevail among a so clety, which calls itself " Perfectionists," and claims to be religious and christian. The peculiarity of the system of the Perfectionists, is that all laws, both human and divine, that are designed to regulate the marriage relation are set aside and denounced, while the unrestrained indulgence of the human passions is practised, not merely as the means to present en joyment, but as means of grace or helps to holiness. The founder of the Society is a graduate of a New England College, a student in two theological seminaries, and now the editor of a paper, published in New York, to sustain and advocate his doctrines.

The centre of this sect is in the town of Le nox, Madison county, N. Y., where about 150 men, women and children live together in one house; with no distinction of property, family or authority. Each one does what seems good in his own eyes. The Bible is their nominal constitution, and how curiously they must follow its teachings, is evident from the fact, that they disavow all separate or individual right in "property, wives and children." Literally, 'they have all these things common.' But the sect is by no means confined to Oneida and Madi, son counties. In New York, Brooklyn, and in Newark, N. J., and in many other places, there are groups of practical members.

The New York Observer, in a notice of the propagandists, says.

In Utah among the Mormons, the distinction of husband and wife is rigidly maintained, and non-intervention insisted upon even at the peri of life. But in the Oneida Association, and in the boarding houses established on similar principles in this vicinity, these distinctions are uttelly abolished, and the freest licentiousness practised as the highest developments. We have been furnished with a large number of says you must!" certificates signed by females of this community, stating that at first they were fearful they were not doing right, but the longer they have practised on the system here pursued, the holier they are sure they grow. On the principle, we suppose, that where there is no law there is no transgression, they have abrogated all authority but inclination, and they never sin, because they never do any thing but what they like. The reader may be amused at the practical operation of the association at Lenox, as we find it detailed in one of their reports, which says :

"The children are trained in a general nursery, and it is found to be altogether a more comfortable task to take care of six in the new way than it had been to wait on one in ordinary circumstances. The only drawback was the temporary distress of the mothers in giving up their little ones to the care of others, which made occasion for some melo dramatic scenes; but the wounds were soon healed, and the mothers learned to value their own freedom and oppor tunity of education, and the improved condition of their children more than the luxury of a sickly material Tenderness."

The way they sleep is curious. One large room is set apart for a domitory, and each bed is encompassed by a sort of square tent, so that one stove warms the whole space, and "as the principles and habits of the association are more gregarious than usual, the sacrifice of privacy is a small affair."

The Boy and the Brick-A Fable .- A boy bearing his tather say, "'twas a poor rule that would not work both ways." said : " If father applies this rule about his work, I will test it in my play."

So setting up a row of bricks, three or four inches apart, he tipped over the first, which, waked from my swate slape and a big striking the second, caused it to fall on the third, which overturned the fourth, and so on through the whole course, until all the bricks lay prostrate.

Well, said the boy, 'each brick has knock ed down his neighbor which stood next to him; I only tipped one. Now I will raise one, and see if he will raise his neighbor. I will see if raising one, will raise all the rest.' He looked in vain to see them rise.

· Here, father,' said the boy, ' is a poor rule: 'twill not work both ways. They knock each try ! other down, but will not raise each other up.' . My son,' said the father, bricks and mankind are alike, made of clay, active in knocking each other down, but not dispised to help each other up.' · Father,' said the boy, ' does the first brick represent or resemble the first Adam?"

The father replied in the following Moral- When men fall, they love company but when they rise, they love to stand alone, like yonder brick, and see others prostrate, and below them.'- Christian Secretary.

Question Well Put .- Inquisitive childre sometimes ask questions that bother old folk mightily to answer, e. g.

"Ma," said an inquisitive little girl, " will the rich and poor people live together when they all go up to heaven ?"

"Yes, my dear, they will be all alike there. "Then, ma, why don't rich and poor Chris tians associate together ?"

you are getting sleepy."

DOING A TRAVELLER-A HOTEL BY H. KOSHOOT.

It was one of the extensive hostelries which are to be "tied up to" in most of the large towns in the interior of New York, that the following scene actually occurred, as can be proved by a cloud of witnesses who have heard the landlord tell the story.

The hotel referred to was, on the occasion of which we are speaking, rather full, and the nephew of the landlord lay sick in one of the rooms on the third floor. He was to receive medicine during the night from the hands of a person who had been procured to "watch" with him .-The landlord had instructed the aforesaid watcher to administer a potion of some little physic to the patient at twelve o'clock; the dose to be repeated at certain hours of the night.

"He is rather techy." said the landlord, "and you had better keep out of his room until you go up to give him the medicine. 'Oh, for that matter,' replied the watcher, who was a novice in the vocation. " I prefer to sit here;" and he eyed the sofa which was in the apartment in a suspicious manner.

'Well,' said the landlord, you wont' forget the number of his room?"

· No. sir. 'And tell him he must take his medicine without making such a confounded him that I say he must take it-it's good cling around the heart.- N. Y. Observer. for him."

Yes, sir.' Good night.

Good night.

Boniface retired, and the watcher deposited himself on the sofa, from which he was roused by his own snoring at a quarter before one. In dismay and confusion he seized the potion and hurried up stairs

The sick man was lodged in No. 52, but the nurse in his haste mistook No. 53 for it, and entering the latter, he saw a person lying in the bed, face upward, with his mouth wide open, respiring with that peculiar gurgle in the throat which indicates strong lungs and a plethoric habit.

Ah! mentally exclaimed the astute allude to? watcher, he makes a fuss about taking bis medicine, does he? I'm blowed, though, if he don't take one dose quietlybefore he wakes up, in fact.'

The idea of giving a potion of bitter physic to a somnolent patient was sufficiently ridiculous; but when we consider that the watcher had entered the wrong room, and was about to administer, it to the wrong man, the affair becomes still more ludicrous.

Our friend, the watcher, acted is aptly, and having filled the bowl of a large spoon with the nauseating mixture, he forced it down the throat of a sleeping traveller, who happened to be a healthy Hibernian that had never tasted physic before in his life. The Irishman struggled and bit the spoon severely, but the watcher plunged it still deeper in his throat, saying, as he did so,

The nasty dose went down, but when Patrick recovered his breath and began to pour forth his objurgations in his own peculiar rhetoric, the watcher discovered that he had committed an egregious blunder, and siezing his light, fled from the

The astonished and enraged treveller sprang from his bed, and was soon heard rushing about in search of the landlord, swearing vengeance against him and all connected with his house. On he came, tearing through the passages, banging the doors, and roaring like a grizzly-bull. 'Oo-oo-oh! It's kilt I am, be dad, any how, Au-ugh! I'm chawed with poison Divil a bit iv a furrum in the wisthern country will I buy now-for I am a dead man! The pison is ating me up just .-Och ! it's enough to make a dog throw his father in the fire! Holy Saint Patrick! Landlord! landlord! land-lo-o-o-o r-r-rd!

Pat had, by this time, descinded to the floor on which the landlord's apartment was situated, and the worthy host, hearing this hillabulloo, opened his door and asked what was the matter?

Ah! is it there ye are? Come out for a bating-or let me come till ye! A ----d poorty house yere kapen, to sind yere man into an honest traveller's room to pison the innocent divil in his slape! Ugh! the bitter, nasty pison! come out here, an' I'll lather ye like blazes!'

. What's the matter, my good friend? inquired Boniface.

· Ow! the matter is it?—when I was dirty blaggard stood fornint me, cammin a big la-adle down my trote full ov pison -an sez he, ye must take it. the landlord sez so: And now, what's the matter, sez you! An' that's one of yere tricks on travellers! Come out here and I'll ba ate ye. Be the blood of the holy marthers, I'll brake ivery bone in yer body! I'll tache ye to pison a dacint thraveller, that's goin to buy land in the wisthern coun-

The Irishman here became entangled in the meshes of a wooden settee which stood in his way, and, at the same time, the landlord's wife seized her wrathy lord -although a "host," in himself, she was not willing to risk him in a rough and tumble fight in the dark-baving plucked him back into the sleeping apartment, she locked the door and bolted it secure-

The prospective purchaser of "wisthern lands," having extricated his legs and arms from those of the settee, still thirsted for the landlord's blood.

Bring me till the murtherin ould vill-yan; let me come at him! At this juncture, however, Mike, the cannot help it." hostler, made his appearance with a lantern he held up to the physic smeared face of the enraged traveller, with a polite request that he would 'hould' his tongue. "Sally had better put you bed, my love, - But Mike was at last compelled to give bright hopes through a lover's brain."- which had the effect to restore him good humor, and when he found that he was not pisoned after all, he retired once more to his bed to dream of the 'farrum' which he was going to buy in the 'wisthern counthry.' Boston Times.

Little Thorns .- The thorns on a rose of blackberry bush are very little things, but they will tear your hands, and irritate your flesh the pain will be dreadful until they are remove ed. Nettles are so small that you can hardly see them with the naked eye; but if you touch them, they will torment you. No matter how joyous and full of glee you may be, one of the least of these thorns is enough to turn your joy into grief and your laughter to crying. A nettle in your finger is enough to spoil your pleasure, and bring down your highest glee.

So the sweetest, the most clinging affection is often shaken by the slighest breath of unkindness. An unkind word from a beloved one is a thorn to a sensitive mind, that sends a pang to the heart. A cross look is a thistle in the eye. A cold expression from a friend is a nettle in the finger. These little things alien. ate affection and spoil friendship. These are the " little foxes that spoil the vine." The delicate rings and tendrils of the vines are agitated by the faintest breeze of summer. The little foxes, running over the vines, break off those tender cords that bind them to the trellis, and leave them at the mercy of the winds.

If children and youth would be happy, they must pluck out the thorns of ill temper, the thistles of envy, and the nettles of jealousy, and drive away all the little foxes that walk rudely fuss as he made with the last dose. Tell over and break the tendrils of affection that

> A Definition of Bigotry .- Old Job Dundee was at one time one of the most popular 'dar. kies' in our city. He was a kind of a patriarch among the colored population, and universally liked by the white lolks. About the time that he stood at the head of the New street church, he was subpænard before 'Squire (now Judge) Wiseman, to testify to the character of a negro who was charged with petty larceny.

Another Earthquake at Memphis. - In the afternoon of the 23d ultimo the people of Mem phis (Tenn.) were startled by another earth quake, which, as represented by the Enquirer of that place, seemed to come from the usual beadquarters of all the earthquakes of the Southwest-the direction of New Madrid, Missouri. The shocks continued in rumbling succession about ten seconds, and were much severer than those experienced last May. A considerable degree of insecurity was generally felt by those who happened at the time to be · Oh, but you must take it-the landlord enclosed by brick walls, and one or two chimneys and some old brick walls in the southern part of the city were shaken down.

> A gentleman was writing a note at a coffeehouse, the other day, and perceiving an impertinent fellow looking over him as he wrote, wound up thus, "I should say more, were it not that an impudent puppy is looking over my shoulder."-"Upon my honor, sir," said the man, "I have not read a word you have written."

> A rumseller in Wilmington saw a reformed man who had relapsed into his former habits, and was walking along intoxicated. He stepped up to him in a laughing manner, and remarked kindly-"What! you've got to drinking again, have you?" The drunkard immediately exclaimed in a loud voice, and with uplifted arm-" Yes all hell's rejoicing !"-Thus ended the interview.

> A Wife Killing her Husband's Assailant .-A few days ago a man named McKimmich went to the house of John R. Sisk, a neighbor. near Marietta, Ohio, and, telling him he intended to kill him, snapped a pistol at his breast three times; and finding it would not go off, he threw him down and commenced beating him over the head with it. Sisk and his wife both cried murder, and finally Mrs. Sisk seized a chair and struck McKimmich over the head, fracturing his skull so badly that he died in a few minutes. The coroner's jury immediately acquitted her.

> The Morning and Evening of Life. - The following is an inscription on a tomb-stone in Massachusetts. It is beautiful:

" I came in the morning-it was spring, And I smiled; I walked out at noon-it was summer, And I was glad;

it was autumn. And I was sad: I laid me down at night-it was winter, And I slept."

Evading the Maine Liquor Law. - Some ingenious devices are adopted in Maine to evade the stringent liquor law of that State. A few days ago a coffin, at first supposed to contain the remains of some deceased person, was carried through the streets in Portland, but the suspicions of the police being excited, it was opened, and lo! it was found to be full of bottles of whiskey, which were immediately confiscated. It is said a wag who saw the operation remarked that, contrary to the usual course of things, the cuffin in this case contained not the body but the spirit.

A poetic young man, in describing the movements of a lot of gold fish, says :-"They flashed and darted about like his fellow countryman a good beating. That young man should be looked to.

. The " Negro Exclusion Bill" passed the Senate of Indiana on the 22d ultimo. The bill, as it now stands, does not prevent the negro from coming into the State, but levels all its penalties against the white man, who employs or feeds a negro whom he does not know to have been a citizen of the State when the constitution was adopted, and requires the negro already here to register his name, and carry around with him a certificate from the Clerk of the Circuit Court that he is entitled to live in the State. Shortly after the passage of the bill, Mr. Dunn, from Lawrence, introduced a resolution instructing the Committee on Federal Relations to report a bill providing for the colonization of the negroes now in or who may hereafter acquire a residence in this State by birth. The resolution was adopted by a vote of 36 to 11.-Richmond (Ia.) Palladium.
