So he played with that child the whole sky was so blue, the sun was so bright, even of the lurest trees, began to fall. the water was so sparkling, the leaves were so green, the flowers were so lovesaw so many butterflies, that every thing was beautiful. This was in fine weath er. When it rained, they loved to watch the falling drops, and to smell the fresh scents. When it blew, it was delightful said, as it came-rushing from its homewhere was tout, they wondered !- whist-ling and howing, driving the clouds before it, bending the trees, rumbling in the chim neys, shaking the house, and making the sea roar in tury. But, when it snowed, that was best of all; for they liked noth ing so well as to look up at the white flakes falling fast and thick, like down from the breast of millions of white birds; and to see how smooth and deep the drift was; and to listen to the hush upon the paths and roads. They had plenty of the finest toys in the world, and the most astonishing pie ture-books: all about scimitars and slipand all new and all true.

But one day, of a sudden, the traveller lost the child. He called to him over and over again but got no answer. So he went upon his road, and went on for a little while without meeting any thing, until at last he came to a handsome boy .-Sohe said to the boy "What do you here ?" And the boy said, "I am always learning. Come and harnwith me." So he learned with that boy about Ju-niter and Juno, and the Greeks and the ed more than I could tell-or be either. they were not always learning; they had to us, and what we do to you. the merriest games that ever were played. They rowed upon the river in summer, and skated on the ice in winter; they were active afoot, and active on horsethe prisoners' base, hare and hounds, folcan think of; nobody could beat them .-They had bolidays, too, and Twelfth cakes, and parties where they danced all night till midnight, and real Theatres where they saw palaces of real gold and silver rise out of the real earth, and saw all the wonders of the world at once. As to friends, they had such dear friends and so many of them, that I want the time to reckon them up. They were all young. like the handsome boy, and were never to be strange to one another all their livesthrough.

Still, one day, in the midst of all these pleasures, the traveller lost the boy as he had lost the child; and, after calling to bim in vain, went on upon his journey .-So, he went on for a little while without seeing any thing, until at last he came to a young man. So he said to the young man "What do you here ?" And the Young Kan said "I am always in love.—

So, Wwent away with that young man, and present they came to one of the prettiest girls that entry was seen—just like Fanny in the corner that—and she had eyes, like Fanny, and hair let Fanny, and dimples like Fanny's, and she laughed and colored just as Fanny does eral conduct and demeanor, and found white I am talking about her. So, the young wan fell in love directly + just as Somebody I won't mention, the first time he came here, did with Panny. Well! He was tegsed sometimes -just as Somehody used to be by Fanny; and ther quarreled sometimes-just as Somebody and Fanny used to quarrel; and they made it up, and sat in the dark and wrote letters every day, and never were happy asunder, and were always looking out for one another and pretending not to, and were engaged at Christmas time, and sat close to one another by the fire and were going to be married very soon-all exactly like Somebody I won't mention, and Fanny

But the traveller lost them one day, as he had lost the rest of his friends, and, after calling to them to come back, which they never did. went on open his journey. So, he went on for a finle while without seeing any thing, until at last he came to a middle-sged gentleman. So. he said to the gentleman, "What are you doing here !" And his answer was, " I am always busy. Come and be busy with me !"

So, he began to be very busy with that gentleman, and they went on through the wood together. The whole journey was through a wood, only it had been open and green at first, like a wood in spring; and now began to be thick and dark, like a wood in summer; some of the little trees that had come out earliest, were even turning brown. The gentleman was not alone, but had a lady of about the same age with him, who was his wife friend they had children, who were with them too. So, they all went on together through the wood, cutting down the trees, and making a path through the branches and the fallen leaves, and carrying burdens, and working hard,

Sometimes, they came to a long green avewould hear a very little distant voice crying. . Father, father, I am another child! Stop for me!" And presently they would see a little ning to join them.

and then they all went on together.

day was beginning to decline, and the sunset to come on. He saw, too, that his hair was turning gray. But, they never could rest long, for they had their journey to perform, and it was necessary for them to be always busy.

At last, there had been so many partings that am always at play. Come and play with there were no children left, and only the traveller, the gentleman, and the lady, went upon their way in company. And now the wood day long, and they were very merry. The | was yellow, and now brown; and the leaves, ly, and they heard such singing birds, and their journey without looking down it when the lady stopped.

" My husband," said the lady, "I am called." They fistened, and they heard a voice, a long way down the avenue, say, " Mother, mother! It was the voice of the first child who had said, "I am going to Henven!" and the father to listen to the wind, and fancy what it said, "I pray not yet. The sunset is very near. I pray not yet ?"

But, the voice cried, "Mother, mother " without minding him, though his hair was now quite white, and the tears were on his face.

Then, the mother who was already drawn him, and said, " My dearest, I am summoned, man's head. Wonderful, ain't it ? and I go!" And she was gone. And the traveller and he were left alone together.

And they went on and on together, until they came to very near the end of the wood; so near, that they could see the sunset shining red before them through the trees.

Yet, once more, while he broke his way among the branches, the traveller lost his friend. He called and called, but there was pers and turbans, and dwarfs and giants no reply, and when he passed out of the wood, and genii and fairies, and blue beards and saw the peaceful son going down upon a and bean statks and riches and caverns wide purple prospect, be came to an old man and forests and Valentines and Orsons; sitting on a fallen tree. So, he said to the old man "What do you here!" A BIT OF ROMANCE. About six years ago, a Dr. H .---. havback; at cricket, and all games at ball; ing become involved in debt, left his home and wife in another_State for Texas, for low my leader, and more sports than I the purpose of improving his fortune in a place where he would be free from the demands of clamorous creditors. In the Mexico, and finally wended his way to children's shoes is large and handsome of his former residence, who, however, he did not know, and inquired of him if he knew his wife, whom he described, without however, telling him the relation he bore to her. The young man replied that Mrs. H- was his sister, and the last he heard of her she was in St. Louis .-After accumulating a competence, Dr. II. left for the purpose of seeking his wife, who had long since given him up as dead. In St. Louis he learned that she had left that place some time previously, and was believed to be in New Albany. He came hither, and upon inquiry learned that she was earning a livelhood by sewing. He learned that she also believed her brother to be dead, not having heard from him house where he onderstood his wife was living, but found she had left there a few days before. He inquired about her genthat it had always been unexceptionable. She spoke but little of her husband, but told every one that she considered him dead. The lady of whom Dr. H-was making inquires discovered that he was the long lost husband, and offered to accompany hun to the house where his wife was sewing. Upon arriving there she said to her, 'Mrs 11- bere is a gentleman who saw your brother in California.' She appeared astonished, looked at the visiter, but apparently did not recognise him. He brushed back his hair, and said quickly, Pall and Winter Goods ever offered in this market, form a body at South Troy. It is likely that Bogie Eliza, don't you know me ?' Mrs. H .... immediately swooned away, and fell on the floor. In the same moment a husband and a brother both supposed to be dead, were restored to her. Dr. II. as we have said has returned with a competence and the supposed widow, it is presumed, will no longer sew for a livelihood. The above statement, we are assured.

is strictly correct. Here is a scene in real life, equal in strangeness to any to which romance ever gave birth.

ever, we consider as our right, if not our duty, to give a simple statement of facts, that others may, in like manner, be benefitted. The case which has induced us to pen this article was that of a young lady of our acquainance, who by frequent exposure to the night air contracted a Cold which settled on the Langs before its ravages could be stayed. (This occurred two years ago this winter.) Various remedies were used, but with very little effect or benefit. The Cough grew worse, with copious expectoration, and the sunken eye, and was doing its worst on her delicate frame. The family physician was consulted, and although he would not admit to the young lady that she really had the Consumption, yet he would give no encouragement as to mske use of a boirle of Dr. Rogers' Compound Syrup of Liverwort and Tar, and we are happy to state she was perfectly cuted in less than three months by this medicine alone, after even hope was destroyed. useless to comment on such a case as this, for the simole truth will reach where polished fiction never can .-If any doubt the authenticity of this statement, let them cell at this office .- U.
